Course Changes for the academic year 2020-21

In response to government guidelines and in the interests of safety, the Department of History of Art has made the following changes to our teaching provision in order to protect health and welfare whilst providing the best possible academic experience in the circumstances.

Lectures to groups of more than ten students will be delivered online. Smaller group teaching will be delivered using a blend of online and in-person teaching, as appropriate and depending on the needs of students and faculty who may be shielding or self-isolating. Aspects of the course delivered by Colleges will not be affected by these changes.

The course structure and learning outcomes of the History of Art Tripos remain unchanged and changes have been approved by the University's Education Policy and Quality Office.
