In addition to singing for service twice weekly in College, Christ's choir pursues an exciting range of activities outside of Chapel, regularly performing in London and around the UK, recording CDs, broadcasting, and undertaking major international tours. The choir is directed by the Director of Music, performer and musicologist David Rowland, assisted by the Organ Scholars.

Organ Scholarships

The College normally has two Organ Scholars who assist the Director of Music in running and directing the Chapel choir. Organ scholars may study any subject except Architecture and the College has a history of appointing individuals reading science subjects as well as arts and humanities. The organ scholars are also encouraged to play a full part in other College musical activities through the Music Society, which offers opportunities for orchestral and choral conducting, as well as the chance to perform in chamber recitals, musicals, etc. In addition to the honorarium which an Organ Scholar receives each year, the College pays for organ lessons. Both organ scholars have designated rooms in college that are equipped with pianos and practice organs. The chapel organ has two manuals and pedals and is mechanical throughout. It is said to be by Father Smith (1705). The original pipework survives and the instrument was restored in the 1980's.

The Choir and Choral Exhibitions

Christ's Choir numbers around 23/24, typically 8 sopranos, 5 altos, 4 tenors and 6 basses, almost all of whom are choral exhibitioners. Exhibitioners may read any subject and there are no specific limits on the numbers awarded at the choral trials. As well as the usual honorarium and some free meals all choir members also benefit from regular vocal training with visiting singing teachers, currently including Anna Harvey, Nicki Kennedy, Ghislaine Morgan, and Paul Tindall.

Weekly Schedule

The regular weekly schedule of rehearsals and services is as follows:

Wednesday 6.00 - 7.30pm rehearsal

Thursday 5.45 - 6.30pm rehearsal; 6.45pm Evensong

Sunday 4.15 - 5.45pm rehearsal; 6.00pm Evensong

The schedule enables individuals to take part in other activities, such as College and University sports teams, and stage or musical performances. It also accommodates the demands, for example, of science or medical students, who have intensive lectures and practicals timetabled throughout much of the day. Most of the choir are actively involved with the flourishing College Music Society, which offers opportunities for orchestral and choral conducting, as well as the chance to perform in many other concerts, chamber recitals and musicals.

Concerts and tours

The choir has a busy concert schedule. Three or four times a year the choir sings with a professional orchestra at St Martin in the Fields and St John's Smith Square in London; recent performances have included works such as Mozart's Requiem, Bach's Magnificat, St. John Passion and his B Minor Mass. Other concerts, mainly, but not exclusively, in the London area are arranged each year. Each summer the choir undertakes a foreign tour. Recent trips include Australia, New Zealand, the USA and Canada. The choir has an extensive concert repertoire including works such as the Bach and Brahms motets, masses by Bach, Mozart, Kodály, extended works by Howells and Britten, and a range of secular music.

Broadcasts and Recordings

Within the last few years the choir and organ scholars have broadcast on a number of occasions for the BBC and for Classic FM. They also have a regular recording schedule, with recent CDs including Music by Howells and Britten (2002), Music by Parry and Stanford (2004), John Blow's church music (2006), Carols by Britten and Leighton (2006), Alessandro Scarlatti and Domenico Scarlatti (2009), Choral works by Sir Philip Ledger (2009), a recording of French Music (2010). German romantic music (2012) and carols by Holst, Vaughan Williams and Warlock (2015).

Christ's Choir welcomes enquiries at any time during the academic year from those who would like to audition, or learn more about singing in the choir. For more information please contact Professor David Rowland, Director of Music, Christ's College, Cambridge, choir.admin@christ.cam.ac.uk. <http://www.christs.cam.ac.uk/choir>.

CHURCHILL COLLEGE
www.chu.cam.ac.uk

The 'Inter Alios' choir has a unique mission not simply to sing great music, but also to be a symbol of peace and dialogue between different groups, and to promote the marginal repertoires of contemporary music and music by women composers.

'Inter Alios' is a joint venture between Churchill College where it serves the Christian Chapel at Churchill College, and Murray Edwards College where it serves the 'Humanist Happenings' Series: a format which is broadly similar to chapel services, but with no theological content. A typical event features a short address on a topical theme, partnered with music and poetry to match. The choir thus provides its members with an opportunity to experience the traditional (Christian) Cambridge Choral Scholar experience and to sing the great works of that repertoire, while also participating in the creation of a new and unique offering.

The title 'Inter Alios' literally translates as 'among others' and speaks to the collective spirit. Firstly, it is inter-'faith' serving both Christian and Humanist communities, as well as inter-faith events such as Abrahamic services at Churchill in association with the Woolf Institute. The choir is also inter-collegiate, international in its make-up and musical repertoire, and inter-arts (particularly in the case of the Humanist recitals).

A typical term sees Inter Alios alternate between Sundays at Churchill and Murray Edwards, as well as undertaking the occasional concert performances in Cambridge and beyond. Highlights include annual performances at the world-famous venue of St Martins in the Fields, London, with professional soloists and orchestra.

Inter Alios' repertoire is also distinctive in that it cultivates twin specialities in contemporary music, and music by female composers (contemporary and otherwise). It has given several first performances of music by students and professionals, and from 2018 will run an annual composition competition for female students in the university.

Organ scholarships

Churchill offers two endowed organ scholarships which are intended to overlap by at least one academic year in order to assist the senior organ scholar during their final year of study. Each scholar receives an annual bursary of £450, a further £250 towards music lessons, and has a college room with a piano set aside for them. The main duty is to play for the weekly services, for one or two additional college events, and to assist with the administrative running of the choir and its library.

These organ scholarships are probably the lightest of any in Oxbridge. We do just one service a week and have a large personnel on hand to fulfil this modest undertaking: a Director of Music, 1–2 organ scholars, and often a graduate assistant too. Additionally, organ scholarships at Churchill can be held for two instead of the usual three years by arrangement on academic grounds. This arrangement can be made in advance, and/or by review in the Lent term of the second year. This allows potential organists to embark on the scholarship without necessarily committing to the role during their final year until they have a clearer picture of what that undertaking will be like. That said, we would of course expect organ scholars to be enthusiastically committed to the job, to embrace their leadership role, and not seek to reduce further the already small load.

Other Music-Making at Churchill

Churchill College is home to an active music scene which draws together much of its student, fellow, and staff membership. It has impressive facilities for music, including a purpose-built music centre (2007) with a Steinway Grand piano (model B) and a French, two-manual harpsichord made for the College by David Rubio in 1983. In addition to chapel music, Churchill provides a wide range of other musical activities and opportunities, including a lively chamber music scene, numerous rock bands, and the highly-regarded Churchill Jazz Band: <http://www.churchilljazzband.com/>. In addition to 'Inter Alios', we also run successful joint ventures with our neighbouring colleges, including a community 'Hill Chorus', and the 'Orchestra on the Hill' <http://www.orchestraonthehill.co.uk/>

University Choral Awards, and other bursaries at Churchill

Churchill College is a full member of all three university music schemes: organ scholarships, choral scholarships, and instrumental awards. Choral scholars receive the standard financial award and free singing lessons. The college provides a resident singing teacher, though scholars are free to study elsewhere if they chose. Churchill also co-runs a second, un-auditioned, 'Hill Chorus', taking on a range of repertoire to complement that of the chapel choir (jazz, pop etc.). There are many opportunities for singers to direct if they wish.

In addition to the university scholarships, Churchill runs its own internal scheme, with a particularly generous range of other musical bursaries for its most accomplished and active musicians in any style. Bursaries are on offer for singers and instrumentalists, as well as for a director of the Hill Chorus, and for an accompanist. Through this, organ and choral scholars can build up a musical portfolio of any size, all of which remunerated and honoured at an appropriate level. Murray Edwards College also provides internal scholarships, including choral scholarships to students singing in 'Inter Alios'.

Time commitment and student testimony

Organ scholars and choir members alike have welcomed the opportunity to make music of extraordinary beauty to a high standard without it dominating their schedule. The low time-commitment has enabled the participation of students, fellows, and staff from Churchill, Murray Edwards and beyond who have rigid schedules in the working week. The choir also maintains a rich social calendar including well-attended weekly pub trips, as well as High Table dinner once per term at the invitation and expense of the Chapel Trustees. Recent students have described the experience of singing in the choir as 'inspiring' and 'unforgettable'.

www.clarecollegechoir.com

The Choir of Clare College (www.clarecollegechoir.com) has gained a reputation as one of the leading university choral groups in England. Music plays a significant role in the life of Clare College, both instrumentally and chorally. Over the years Clare has produced many respected musical figures such as conductors Sir Roger Norrington, Ivor Bolton, Richard Egarr, Andrew Manze, Dominic Wheeler, Robin Ticciati, and Nicholas Collon, instrumentalists Margaret Faultless, Stephen Farr, Daniel Pailthorpe, Ashok Gupta, James McVinnie and Elizabeth Kenny, composers John Rutter and Martin Suckling, and many singers, including Elin Manahan Thomas, Simon Bailey, and Nicholas Mulroy to name but a few. The Choir exists primarily to sing regular choral services in the College Chapel, and also maintains a busy external schedule with regular concert and festival appearances in the UK and abroad, radio and television broadcasts, at least two (sometimes more) international tours each year, and two commercial recordings every year for the Harmonia Mundi label. The College's Director of Music is conductor and composer Graham Ross (www.grahamross.com), himself an alumnus of the College.

External appearances

The Choir has appeared twice at the BBC Proms (the first Oxbridge mixed choir ever to do so), and frequently performs with the world's leading orchestras and conductors, including Handel Messiah with Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment with Graham Ross, Beethoven Symphony No. 9 with Richard Tognetti and the Australian Chamber Orchestra, Berlioz Messe Solennelle with Sir John Eliot Gardiner and the Monteverdi Choir in Paris, Bernstein Chichester Psalms with Graham Ross and the Malaysian Philharmonic Orchestra, Handel Messiah with René Jacobs and Freiburg Baroque Orchestra, Mozart Mass in c with Ivor Bolton in Munich and at the Salzburg Festival, Elgar The Dream of Gerontius with Edward Gardner and Sir Mark Elder and the London Philharmonic Orchestra, Handel anthems with Lars Ulrik Mortensen and the European Union Baroque Orchestra, and Schutz Christmas Story with Sir Roger Norrington. In addition to overseas touring, the Choir has performed in all the major concert halls of the UK, with regular appearances in London at the Southbank Centre, Royal Albert Hall, St John's, Smith Square and Cadogan Hall.

Tours and recordings

The Choir tours extensively every year with performances across Europe, the USA, Australia, Japan, China, Russia, and the Far East. It has produced an impressive collection of best-selling CD recordings for many record labels, including Messiah for Harmonia Mundi, Palestrina Motets for EMI, Illumina for Collegium (winner of Gramophone Award), and a wide discography on the Naxos label, including music by John Rutter (Naxos No. 1 in Classical charts), Stainer, Tavener, S. S. Wesley, and Vaughan Williams. Since 2011 the Choir has recorded exclusively for Harmonia Mundi, including a disc of works by Imogen Holst (winner of a Diapason d'Or award, Le Choix de France Musique Award and a Gramophone Award nomination). Their current ten-album series of Music for the Church Year has been praised in the national and international press with numerous awards and 5-star reviews.

Repertoire

The repertoire sung in Chapel is extremely wide-ranging, from early Renaissance to present day. The Choir has commissioned many new works, and in recent years has given world première performances of works by John Tavener, Tarik O'Regan, Brett Dean, John Rutter, Giles Swayne, Matthew Martin, Alexander Raskatov, Nico Muhly, Cecilia MacDowall and Graham Ross. Often services or concerts involve other instrumentalists, including Bach Cantatas with the period instruments, Mozart and Schubert Masses with string ensembles, Bernstein's Chichester Psalms with organ, harp and percussion, and James MacMillan's Seven Last Words from the Cross with string ensemble. External performances in addition offer a wide range of secular music. The College also holds its own Chamber Music and Carol Composition Competitions. The Choir webcasts its Chapel services on the Choir website, and gives frequent broadcasts for BBC Radio 3, Classic FM, and BBC Television.

Choral and Organ Scholarships

Up to around twenty-six choral scholarships and two organ scholarships may be awarded at any one time. The Choir sings three Choral Evensongs per week during Term, on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Sundays, and in addition sings Complines and occasional special services, such as the annual performance of a Requiem on All Souls' Day, the Ash Wednesday Eucharist and the popular Advent Carol Services. Each service is preceded by a rehearsal; extra rehearsals are arranged as necessary. No religious commitment is required, though the Choir is expected to lead the spoken parts of the liturgy. A good level of sight-reading is advantageous, but not essential. Students from all backgrounds and from any school are encouraged to apply, and at Clare there are no subject restrictions for academic study for choral and organ scholars. Organ scholars work closely with Graham Ross, the Director of Music, and are encouraged to sing with and given regular opportunities to conduct the Choir. Choral and Organ Scholars can expect approximately five or six weeks of their vacations each year to be devoted to external commitments. Advance notice of commitments for the forthcoming year is published each October. Members of the Choir are expected to participate fully in the Choir's schedule, including concerts, tours, broadcasts, and recordings, and to support the choral activities of the College Music Society.

Regular weekly schedule

Tuesdays and Thursdays: 4.55pm rehearsal, 6.15pm service

Wednesdays: 6-7pm rehearsal

Sundays: 3.30-5.30pm rehearsal (with tea), 6pm service, 7.15pm drinks, 7.30pm Dinner in Great Hall (free of charge to Choir members)

Benefits of a scholarship at Clare

In addition to the wealth of experience and opportunities offered throughout three years of a Scholarship, all Choral and Organ Scholars at Clare receive free singing lessons from the College's respected teachers, who include Nicola-Jane Kemp, Robert Rice and Helen Groves. Organ Scholars receive free tuition from James McVinnie (formally St Paul's Cathedral, Westminster Abbey) and harpsichord tuition from Douglas Hollick, as well as from visiting professors and teachers. The College's Masterclass Series gives the opportunities for many instrumental and vocal classes, free of charge to all students. Recent artists have included The Schubert Ensemble, Ann Murray, Michael Chance, Andrew Staples and Roderick Williams. The Choir organises regular social events, and all scholars dine free of charge in Hall after Sunday Evensong. College Feasts take place regularly throughout the year, at which Choral Scholars regularly sing and dine with guests, free of charge. Tours are always free to members of the Choir, who are always provided with accommodation and food or with generous per diems.

Organs and keyboards at Clare

Clare Chapel has two organs in regular use. The main two-manual Rudolf von Beckerath (1971) organ (refurbished by Hans-Ulrich Erbslöh (2003) has a mechanical key and pedal (tracker) action with electric drawstop and piston action (range: Manuals C-g3 (56 notes), Pedals C-g1 (32 notes)), with a radiating and concave pedal board and console design by Noel Mander, London. The College also has a fully-functioning chamber organ by John Snetzler (1755), acquired from John Bibby of Winchester in 1985, and restored in 2016. Previously it is known to have been in the Mission Church of St James, Heysham, Lancashire, and before that it was in the collection of the nineteenth-century musicologist, J Fuller Maitland, of Borwick Hall near Carnforth. At one time it was in Shaw House near Newbury. The compass of the organ is from GG(no #) to f3, 58 notes, with a shifting movement (to reduce the number of sounding stops) and a primitive 'nag's-head' swell, enclosing the Hautbois. The pitch is slightly less than a semitone below concert pitch (A = circa 429), and is often used to accompany the choir in early repertoire. In addition the Chapel has a fine two-manual Rubio harpsichord used regularly in early liturgical repertoire and in performances at Clare. In addition to a wide selection of pianos around the College, the Chapel has a Steinway upright piano for use in rehearsals and in recitals.

Meeting the Director of Music

Graham Ross is always happy to meet and hear prospective choral and organ scholars informally at any point throughout the year, to give them the opportunity to hear the Choir rehearse and perform, and to help answer any questions they may have about the application and audition process, and to help decide if a Choral or Organ Scholarship at Clare is right for them. CORPUS CHRISTI COLLEGE
www.corpus.cam.ac.uk

Corpus is a beautiful college in central Cambridge. It has approximately 250 undergraduates, with a further 200 graduates at its other campus in Leckhampton. Music of all kinds has long been at the heart of the College's life. The College enjoys a distinguished musical tradition, and has produced more than its fair share of notable musicians, including renowned conductors Sir Mark Elder and Sir Richard Armstrong, and church musicians including Boris Ord, Edward Higginbottom, Ryan Wigglesworth, Tarik O'Regan and Richard Shephard.

The College Chapel Choir

The College Chapel is a graceful and intimate space at the centre of the College, and musical activities are focused there. It has a beautiful, warm acoustic and a large space at the east end suitable for concerts. The College choir (numbering about 20 singers) sings three weekly services: Sunday morning Eucharist, and Evensong on Sunday and Wednesday. This commitment, in encouraging the choir to flourish, also allows students to pursue other musical interests and keep on top of their academic activities. Musical events in College are well-supported: the feeling of community is strong at Corpus. Further afield, the choir commits to an annual tour, most recently representing the college in Singapore, New Zealand and Hong Kong, and a programme of concerts in and out of Cambridge, and has three recent CD recordings to its name. The choir also joins together with Old Members of the College to sing Evensong and major choral works (St John Passion, 2015; Messiah 2016).

Facilities

Corpus College Chapel houses a fine three-manual organ built by NP Mander in 1968. The instrument is particularly suited to its task of accompanying repertoire with the choir, as well as being a versatile and well-proportioned solo instrument. The College also has several notable pianos, including an excellent Model D Steinway the Chapel; and a newly restored two-manual Goble harpsichord. There are various practice rooms available to students for private study and tuition.

Organ Scholars

Our intention is that organ scholars at Corpus are very hands-on when it comes to conducting and playing for services and rehearsals, while also enjoying the guidance and advice of the Director of Music. Scholars receive intensive training and support during their time at the College. Organ lessons are provided, as well as an annual stipend, and the organ scholars are traditionally accommodated in some of the best rooms in Corpus.

Choral Scholars

Choral Award Holders, appointed through the Inter-Collegiate Scheme, are provided with an annual stipend, and all members of the choir receive regular tuition (currently four lessons a term) with our singing teacher, the prominent professional singer Jonathan Brown, and are also invited to Formal Hall every Sunday evening as guests of the College. Whilst appointments to the choir are also made to the choir in October, Choral Awards are only made through the Inter-Collegiate Scheme. A good level of sight-reading is advantageous, but not essential, and the ability to learn quickly is a vital part of life in any Cambridge College choir. The Director of Music is very happy to meet any prospective students at any stage in advance of the Choral Awards scheme to offer guidance and advice.

Regular weekly choir schedule

Wednesdays 5pm rehearsal, 6.45pm Evensong

Fridays 5-6.15pm rehearsal

Sundays: 9am rehearsal and 10am Choral Eucharist; 4.30-5.45pm rehearsal, 6pm Evensong, 7.15pm drinks, 7.45pm Dinner in Hall (free)

The Director of Music is the conductor and organist Robin Walker. Robin is pleased to hear from anyone wishing to be involved in chapel music at Corpus and to welcome them when visiting the college. Please email rw579@corpus.cam.ac.uk

The Chapel and the organ

The Chapel is a beautiful space with a stunningly good acoustic, making it a superb venue for choral and chamber music. It was completely refurbished in 2015, when a new highly-acclaimed two-manual organ built for us by Kenneth Tickell and Company was installed.

Choral services

Choral Evensong takes place in Downing College Chapel on every Sunday evening during Full Term, providing the main focus for the work of the Organ Scholars and Choir. The service is followed by Formal Hall, a candlelit dinner at which the Organ Scholars, Choir, members of the congregation, preacher and the Chaplain eat together. The Choir sings the College Grace at the start of the dinner. The Choir also sings the late evening service of Compline on two Thursdays each term at 10 pm. The Choir is involved in other events during the year which are significant occasions in the life of the whole College. The two most popular services are the Advent Carol Service and the Commemoration of Benefactors. The Choir may be invited to sing at weddings and memorial services. Downing College Chapel has a fine library of over one thousand choral works and provides an ample budget for its maintenance and expansion.

Organ Scholarships

Downing College is unusual in having a very active choral tradition without a Director of Chapel Music. This means that the two Organ Scholars take full responsibility themselves for training and conducting the Choir. In any service, one conducts while the other plays the organ. Working with the Chaplain, they have a high degree of influence over the choice of music for choral services, and the opportunity to plan tours to other countries. They are also very well supported by a Mentor, Christopher Robinson (formerly Director of Music at St John's College), who offers training and guidance.

An Organ Scholarship at Downing is a significant position of leadership, and the College seeks to appoint talented musicians who can show the potential and the enthusiasm to direct the Choir effectively. In return, the Organ Scholars receive £450 per year and funding for organ lessons. Organ Scholars also receive a free dinner at Formal Hall on Sunday evenings and are invited to join the Chaplain and Chapel Wardens for a free lunch on Wednesdays. They receive money towards the cost of the annual tour and may have free singing lessons if they wish. Organ Scholars study various different subjects and go on to many different kinds of work. In recent years, they have included students of Medicine, Law, Natural Sciences and Music. For those who wish, an Organ Scholarship at Downing College can be the start of a career in church music. Previous Downing Organ Scholars include Andrew Millington (Exeter Cathedral), Carl Jackson (Hampton Court Palace), Martin Baker (Westminster Cathedral), Benjamin Saunders (Leeds Cathedral) and David Pipe (York Minster).

Choral Awards

Downing College participates in the Inter-Collegiate Choral Award Scheme, giving awards worth £100 per year to 12 members of the Choir. In addition, everyone in the Choir receives free candlelit dinners in Formal Hall after Sunday services, free singing lessons, and a subsidy towards the annual overseas tour. There is also an enjoyable programme of social events. Recent overseas summer tours have included visits to China and Canada. There are also usually one or two visits to sing Choral Evensong in English cathedrals each year. A typical week in the life of the Choir includes a rehearsal on the Thursday evening and a rehearsal and service on the Sunday evening. The only weekday services in Downing College are the two Complines each term, so singing takes up less of people's time than it does in most other chapel choirs. It is common for Cambridge students to struggle to find time for all the activities they wish to be involved in, so the Downing approach is appreciated by those who wish to sing to a high standard but with fewer time commitments each week. There are usually about 20 to 25 singers in the Choir, including those who have applied through the Inter-Collegiate Choral Award Scheme, and others who have attended auditions held in Downing early in the Michaelmas Term. The Chaplain is always happy to answer questions about any of these matters, and visits from potential applicants are very welcome.

EMMANUEL COLLEGE

www.emma.cam.ac.uk

Emmanuel is one of the larger Cambridge colleges, with around 450 undergraduates, a fine campus in the centre of town, and a chapel designed by Christopher Wren. Renowned for its combination of academic achievement with relaxed atmosphere, it also has an active musical life, in which the chapel music plays a central role.

Choral Scholarships

Emmanuel has a choir of around 25 men and women, which sings at services each Thursday and Sunday in term. A typical weekly schedule runs: Tuesday 5.15-6.45 rehearsal; Thursday 4.45-7.00 rehearsal and eucharist; Sunday 4.30-7.00 rehearsal and evensong followed by free formal dinner. College occasions are marked with special services throughout the year. Besides this regular schedule, the choir makes occasional visits to other British churches and cathedrals, as well as an annual foreign tour. In recent years the choir has also joined forces with the University Musical Society (CUMS) to perform Elgar's The Kingdom in King's College Chapel and Mahler's Second Symphony in Ely Cathedral. They have given performances of Bach's St John Passion, Mozart's Requiem, Haydn's The Creation and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the Barbican alongside students from the Guildhall School of Music and Drama and the Royal Northern College of Music with the Academy of Ancient Music. The choir also joined forces with the Proms Youth Choir for a performance of Britten's War Requiem at the Albert Hall.

Like many collegiate choirs, Emmanuel has a mixture of Choral Scholars, appointed through the choral trials, and Choral Exhibitioners, who join by audition on arrival as students in Cambridge. Choral scholarships carry with them the standard University award of £100 per year, as well as free dinners, free singing lessons with a superb singing teacher, regular choral workshops, and of course choir tours: recent destinations include Boston, Italy, Mexico and Thailand. Members of the choir can study any academic subject. Although the level of time commitment is relatively low, the choir sings to a high standard, covering the full range of repertoire from plainsong to twenty-first century, and the choir enjoys a happy social life.

Organ Scholarships

Emmanuel has a fine tradition of organ scholars who have gone on to a wide variety of careers, including not just the cathedral/collegiate world (where alumni include Peter Wright, Organist of Southwark Cathedral, Edward Jones, University Organist and Choirmaster at Harvard University, and Joseph Fort, Director of Music at King's College London) but also concert careers as an organist or on some other instrument, teaching, lecturing and even banking. There are normally two organ scholars in residence at any one time. The Director of Chapel Music and organ scholars work closely together to recruit and train the choir, plan repertoire, organise tours and recordings.

Most Emmanuel organ scholars read for a degree in music, as one of three or so music students that the college typically admits each year, but this is not obligatory: with the exception of Land Economy, any degree can in principle be combined with the organ scholarship. It carries with it an award of £450 per year, free organ lessons with any teacher, optional singing lessons, an entertainment allowance for choir parties and a substantial rent rebate (33% as Junior Organ Scholar, 67% as Senior); extras such as weddings carry additional fees. The Senior Organ Scholar occupies a fine set of rooms in Front Court and both scholars have pianos provided in their rooms. The greatest perk, though, is the College's organ, a beautiful three-manual instrument in the gallery of the Wren chapel. It was entirely rebuilt in 1988 by Kenneth Jones, using the original seventeenth-century Father Smith case. It has superbly responsive tracker action and an excellent tonal range which makes it one of very few instruments in Cambridge which can do proper justice to the full range of organ repertoire and choral accompaniments.

Music at Emmanuel

Emmanuel has a thriving Music Society which runs a college orchestra, choral society and jazz band, termly concerts and weekly recitals of solo and chamber music. As well as several music practice rooms, the College has two excellent performance spaces, the sixteenth-century Old Library (with a Bösendorfer grand piano) and the concert hall in the Queen's Building (with a Steinway model B grand and a two-manual harpsichord). A special fund is available to support practical music in College, for instance to help with the cost of putting on concerts.

Please go to www.emma.cam.ac.uk and follow links to the 'Chapel' section, as well as to the 'undergraduate prospectus' to find out more about Emmanuel's rich academic and social life. If you have further questions, or would like to discuss a prospective application, do get in touch with the Director of Music, Dr Christopher Whitton (clw36@cam.ac.uk).

FITZWILLIAM COLLEGE
www.fitz.cam.ac.uk

The Chapel & Organ

The modern chapel was designed by Sir Richard McCormac in 1990 and houses an excellent two-manual organ by Peter Collins as well as Bechstein grand piano.

The Choir

The Fitzwilliam College Chapel Choir is known for its high standard of singing, a commitment to a wide range of repertoire and its friendly, welcoming atmosphere. The Choir, who sing services fully robed, is comprised of between 16 and 20 undergraduate and graduate students, both male and female. Most of the members of the choir are students at Fitzwilliam but Volunteers are also drawn from other Cambridge colleges. Fitzwilliam College Chapel Choir features at the college's formal dinners and events where they perform a sung grace freshly composed by each Senior Organ Scholar in turn. They also regularly perform in concert where they are able to explore repertoire beyond the Chapel genre. The choir has undertaken several overseas tours to Italy, Spain, The Netherlands and France. In March 2006 the choir recorded its first CD, Songs on the Hill, covering a range of music from both sacred and secular repertoire, and a follow-up CD of Christmas carols was released, with a further disc due for release in 2015 and another recording planned in 2015-16. The Organ Scholars are able to play a large role in leading the artistic decisions and shaping tours, visits and recordings according to their own interests.

Rehearsals Thursdays 7.00 pm - 8.30pm (coaching for soloists from 8.30-9.00 pm)

Sundays 4.30 pm - 5.45 pm

Services Sundays 9.00 am (Holy Communion usually organist + small vocal group)

Sundays 6.00 pm (Choral Evening Services - both organists and full choir)

All members of the choir, including Organ Scholars, receive a free hot meal after each service and other performances. In addition the Choir is invited to a free formal each term including 'Choir on High Table' in Lent term.

The Choral Services

The choir's main duty is to provide music for the weekly evening service on Sundays held in the award-winning College Chapel, which boasts some of the best choral acoustics in the university. The Choir sings many 'extra' services on top of this weekly service across the year, singing full Choral Evensong, Communion Masses, Requiems, Carol Services, Evening Prayer and Compline covering a wide range of repertoire. The choir also provides music for the Holy Communion service on Sunday mornings exploring repertoire suitable for 4-6 voices in small groups. Fitzwilliam Chapel Choir sings several 'joint' services a term with other Cambridge colleges, recently singing Choral Evensong with the choirs of Sidney Sussex, Emmanuel and Robinson. The choir regularly sings Choral Evensong as a visiting choir in some of England's finest cathedrals including Ely, Peterborough, St Edmundsbury and Norwich as well as often being warmly invited to sing in churches across Cambridgeshire. The choir sings an annual joint Choral Evensong with St Edmund's Hall, Oxford, travelling to Oxford biennially.

The Organ Scholars

The Fitzwilliam Chapel Choir provides a wonderful opportunity for its Organ Scholars as it particularly welcomes candidates who are keen to develop their musical directing and conducting skills. Organ Scholars can take an active role in the running of the Chapel Choir and have the opportunity to conduct both at services and formal events at the College and across the University. Working with the Director of Music, Katharine Parton, Organ Scholars are able to determine a balance between organ playing and musical direction that matches their interests and desired focus. In addition, Organ Scholars in their Senior year compose a new setting for the College Grace which is performed at formal events in College. Fitzwilliam College usually has two Organ Scholars, a Senior and Junior, who share playing and conducting for the Chapel Choir between them.

In addition to the £450 per annum scholarship, Organ Scholars receive fully subsidised lessons on organ with the teacher(s) of their choice (scholars usually learn with a visiting teacher from London or travel to London to study) and also have free regular conducting lessons from the Director of Music, Katharine Parton, an experienced conductor and conducting researcher. From 2014-15 Organ Scholars will also benefit from conducting and choral workshops with visiting musician Matthew Waldren. Current Organ Scholars have enjoyed many opportunities to accompany soloists, including visiting professionals such as members of the Fitzwilliam String Quartet, in both workshop and performance across Cambridge. Organ Scholars are also eligible for free singing lessons with visiting teacher Sarah Leonard (who teaches all Fitzwilliam-based members of the Chapel Choir) with a particular focus on understanding vocal technique for conducting and accompanying. Scholars are normally appointed through the Intercollegiate Organ Scholar Scheme but prospective organist applicants, both for graduate and undergraduate degrees, are always welcome to come and play the organ and should contact the Director of Music for further information.

Music at Fitzwilliam

Each Organ Scholar has access to a digital piano in their own room as well access to the college's extensive practise facilities including, beyond the usual facilities; grand pianos (a Steinway and two Bechsteins), three harpsichords and a harmonium.

Fitzwilliam College is a hub of small group vocal music; both Fitz Barbershop and Fitz Sirens are based in the college. Other ensembles based at the College include the Fitz Swing Band and Orchestra on the Hill (jointly with Churchill), the Fitzwilliam Oratorio Project (with professional musicians leading the performance), the Fitzwilliam Chamber Opera and large number of chamber ensembles. The breadth of ensembles based at Fitz means that a wide of range of non-Chapel musical interests can be explored within the college environment particularly in leadership roles both in conducting and composing. The college itself and the Fitzwilliam College Music Society also host a large number of concerts and workshops by professional musicians in the award-winning auditorium and chapel throughout the year.

Contact

Interested candidates are most welcome to contact the Director of Music Katharine Parton with any questions about the role of the Organ Scholars, the audition, or to arrange a visit to Fitzwilliam College and are warmly invited to email her on music@fitz.cam.ac.uk.

The Chapel Choir: In the past fifteen years, Girton College Chapel Choir has emerged as one of the most distinguished mixed-voice choirs in Cambridge, a distinction confirmed by the prizes it won in the 1999 Takarazuka International Competition in Japan and the 2007 Spittal International Competition in Austria. In the former, the choir won the Gold Medal in the mixed chorus division and the Grossmann Prize, awarded by the conductor of the Vienna Boys' Choir to the ensemble deemed to produce the best sound; in the latter, Girton Choir won third prize out of ninety choirs from across the globe. Recently, it has won critical acclaim for its latest CD, The Feast Celestial, recorded whilst on tour in the USA. The choir, which has approximately 24 members, is comprised of choral scholars and a small number of volunteers drawn from several Cambridge colleges.

Tours: The ensemble undertakes an ambitious touring schedule; recent ventures have included concerts in the U.S.A., Slovakia, Spain, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, Mexico (at the invitation of the Bishop of Mexico), Singapore, (at the closing ceremony of the National University's centenary celebrations), Malaysia, Thailand (a concert for the UN specially approved by the then Secretary General, Kofi Annan), Australia, Japan, Hong Kong, the Czech Republic, Italy (performing for Pope John Paul II), Germany and France. Shorter domestic tours take place every term. These frequently involve deputising for the cathedral choirs in the major foundations; recent venues have included Salisbury, Worcester, York, Canterbury, Lincoln, Westminster Abbey, and St Paul's Cathedral.

Concerts, Recordings, and Services: The choir has collaborated with several leading professional ensembles, including the London Mozart Players (in concerts at St John's Smith Square and Goldsmith's Hall) and Xacona, winners of the Bruges Early Music Competition, as well as the Collegium Musicum (the University's Baroque orchestra), and His Majesty's Majestys Sagbutts and Cornetts. The choir also works regularly with guest directors including, in recent years, Judith Clurman (formerly Head of Choral Studies at the Juilliard School in New York), Sir David Willcocks, Dr Christopher Robinson, and David Lowe. Several recordings have been made in recent years for the BBC, Priory Records, the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, and for a variety of radio and television networks in the Far East. The choir's primary role, however, is to sing for the chapel services, typically Evensong on Sundays, Compline on alternate Tuesdays and Choral Eucharist on weekday festivals, as well as participating in joint services with other college choirs thereby allowing choir-members to experience the wider Cambridge choral scene, meet other singers, and appreciate some of the finest architecture Cambridge has to offer.

Rehearsals and Repertoire: Rehearsals for these and other engagements take place twice a week. The choir's repertoire is varied and distinctive, ranging from Byrd to Britten, but with a particular emphasis upon contemporary choral literature. Recent highlights have included several first performances, the English première of Leighton's Hymn to Matter and the first performance of the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis by Nico Muhly, assistant to Philip Glass, as well as works by Jonathan Rathbone, J.A.C. Redford, and Gareth Wilson. There is also ample opportunity for student composers to have their work performed by the Choir or other College musicians. Though the bulk of the choir's repertoire is sacred, concerts and college functions provide opportunities to explore secular works.

Choral Scholarships: Girton College is prepared to elect up to eight Choral Scholars each year. Holders of Choral Awards are expected to sing in the Chapel Choir and to take an active part in the musical life of the College. Though standards are high, a Choral Scholarship at Girton involves a relatively light time commitment; singing in Girton Choir is therefore perfectly compatible with studying the more onerous subjects, such as Medicine and Veterinary Medicine, and the resulting mix of subjects helps make the choir socially rich and diverse. The College contributes generously to the choir's activities: domestic tours cost choir members nothing, and international tours are heavily subsidised.

The Role of the Organ Scholars:

As noted above, the Director of Chapel Music has the principal responsibility for the running of the choir. The organ scholars' main duty is that of accompanying. However, a flexible approach to the division of work encourages them to gain as much conducting experience as they wish; this naturally varies according to the individual, but does allow the organ scholars to tailor their experience here. Other benefits include the provision of one of the most luxurious rooms in College, with a piano (a Blüthner grand for the senior), a network telephone, and organ lessons with a teacher of your choice, paid for by the College. The organ scholar is a key member of the College's very active music society, which puts on weekly recitals and termly orchestral concerts. Within this framework there are ample opportunities for conducting and performing, as soloist or accompanist, and new ventures are always supported by the College.

The Chapel Organ

In 2002, Girton College acquired a brand-new, four-manual, mechanical-action organ, constructed by the outstanding Swiss firm, St-Martin, who are famed for their work with players as varied as Lionel Rogg and Guy Bovet. The organ was conceived as an all-purpose instrument, equally at home in Baroque, Romantic and more modern repertoire. Frequently chosen for university organ examinations, the Girton organ is widely acknowledged as one of the finest in Cambridge. We recently celebrated its tenth birthday with a typically diverse programme including organ concertos by Poulenc and Handel, and Bach cantatas.

Music at Girton

Girton enjoys a lively musical life based round a series of weekly recitals given by undergraduates and visiting professionals. The musical environment at the college is particularly rich. In addition to the Director of Music (Martin Ennis who, alongside his academic work, is a professional keyboard player and works with leading ensembles in the UK and overseas) and the Director of Chapel Music (Gareth Wilson, well-known as both conductor and composer, as well as a lecturer and theologian), there are no fewer than four internationally renowned musicians on the Girton staff. These are: Margaret Faultless, leader of the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment, and Head of Historical Performance at the Royal Academy of Music in London; Jeremy West, co-founder and director of His Majestys Sagbutts and Cornetts; Andrew Kennedy, winner of the 2005 Cardiff Singer of the Year Competition and now an internationally feted operatic tenor; and Kate Kennedy, a professional cellist, and a leading expert on English music.

GONVILLE AND CAIUS COLLEGE

Caius ('Keys') Choir sings three services each week during term and maintains a busy schedule of other activities including concerts, tours, radio and TV broadcasts, and recordings. The choir consists of 24 student singers (normally 8 Sopranos, 5 Altos, 5 Tenors, 6 Basses) and is directed by the Director of Music, Dr Geoffrey Webber, assisted by two Organ Scholars. In recent years several choir members have gained places to study singing at postgraduate level in London and elsewhere, and recent graduates now have established solo careers or sing with professional choirs such as The Sixteen, Polyphony, Tenebrae, and The Monteverdi Choir (as detailed on the website). The chief qualities that are looked for in applicants are commitment, strong vocal potential and sight-reading ability. However it is recognised that high-level singing opportunities are not always available at school, and applicants with relatively little experience to date should not feel discouraged from applying. Choral awards are open to all voices (including both male and female altos) and are compatible with reading any subject.

Weekly schedule

Sunday: 5 pm rehearsal, 6 pm Choral Evensong.

Monday & Wednesday: 6.05-7 pm rehearsal.

Tuesday & Thursday: 5.30 pm rehearsal, 6.30 pm Choral Evensong/Eucharist.

Singing Lessons, Finance

Weekly singing lessons are provided in College free of charge either with one of the three College singing teachers, Elaine Pearce, Kate Symonds-Joy, and David Lowe, or with external teachers by arrangement. A library of solo vocal music is available for use in conjunction with lessons. Choir members are strongly encouraged to develop their solo vocal singing during their time at Caius alongside their work for the choir. Fees are normally paid for concerts and broadcasts to supplement the standard £100 choral award. Choir members stay in College free of charge during vacations when undertaking choir activities and tour expenses are covered by the College. In addition, a special fund exists to help singers wishing to take part in occasional master-classes or other vocal opportunities at any time of the year. The Choir Administrator deals with all arrangements for the choir's activities.

Radio & Television broadcasts, CD & DVD recordings

Caius Choir makes regular radio and television broadcasts from venues in Cambridge and elsewhere. Broadcasts of Choral Evensong on BBC Radio 3 have been notably adventurous in content, including a service of music composed entirely by students at Caius, a service of South African music broadcast from Pietermaritzburg in South Africa, and the 40-part motet Spem in alium by Thomas Tallis from Waltham Abbey (with former choir members). Other BBC work has included various programmes on the radio of both sacred and secular music, and performances on BBC 1, the World Service and Channel 4. The Choir has made many CD recordings covering a wide range of sacred and secular music from both English and continental repertoire. Composers featured include J. S. Bach, Puccini, Gounod, Rheinberger, Charles Wood, Robin Holloway and Rodion Shchedrin. Recent releases include a CD of choral works by the leading British composer Judith Weir (BBC Music Magazine's Choral and Song Choice in December 2011), and the ground-breaking disc In Praise of St Columba; The Sound World of the Ancient Celtic Church (BBC Music Magazine's Choral and Song Choice in September 2014). Their 2015 release Romaria: Choral Music from Brazil includes sacred and secular music from the 1950s through to the present day in a programme developed in conjunction with experts from the music department of the University of São Paulo, and early English music features on their most recent release Chorus vel Organa: Music for the Lost Palace of Westminster which includes music from the Caius Choirbook, a manuscript held in the College with music probably sung at the Royal Palace of St Stephen's, Westminster, in c. 1520. The Choir has also worked with the choirs of St John's and Clare Colleges on a filmed DVD release of music by Francis Poulenc, and with the choir of King's College, Cambridge on a recording of music by John Rutter for EMI. Please see the Choir website for reviews and further details of all the Choir's recordings.

Tours, Concerts, Repertoire

The choir travels abroad at least once each year, singing in major concert halls, universities, cathedrals and churches across Europe and beyond, including South Africa, the USA, South America and Asia. In 2016 the choir toured the USA from Vermont to Texas via Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Arkansas. In April 2017 the Choir are singing in Spain, and in August they will be touring in the Far East. Some tours involve participation in international choral festivals, such as the European Symposium on Choral Music held in Ljubljana, Slovenia, or the Festival of University Choirs in Valencia, Spain; others involve collaboration with other choirs or orchestras, such as performing Handel's Solomon with the Philharmonia Baroque of San Francisco, or providing the chorus for Mozart's Idomeneo with Opera Northern Ireland. In recent years the Choir has performed a series of concerts in Bordeaux with the Orchestre National de Bordeaux Aquitaine, singing Haydn's Creation, Handel's Messiah and J. S. Bach's St John Passion and St Matthew Passion. The choir also gives a number of concerts during the course of each year, including regular appearances at the Spitalfields Festival in London. Concerts at home or abroad also give the opportunity to sing for top conductors such as Nicholas McGegan or Jane Glover. Music sung at the regular Chapel services includes a wide range of traditional Anglican repertoire by Byrd, Purcell, Wesley, Howells etc, as well as major Continental Catholic repertoire and a varied diet of less familiar music. The choir also has a strong commitment to contemporary music; it has given the opening concert of the St Pancras Festival of Contemporary Church Music in London, and commissioned works have featured regularly in the liturgical category of the British Composer Awards. Commissioned composers include Julian Anderson, Stuart MacRae, Francis Grier, James MacMillan, Cheryl Frances-Hoad, Gabriel Jackson, Judith Weir, Alexander Goehr, Robin Holloway (a Fellow of Caius), Edward Rushton, Sasha Siem and Joel Rust.

Organ Scholarships

The two Organ Scholars are responsible for all organ playing in Chapel and play a full role in the work of the Choir by acting as assistants to the Director of Music. They are also encouraged to take a leading role in the musical life of the College in general. The Chapel organ is a modern tracker instrument built in 1981 by Johannes Klais of Bonn. It is a large and versatile three-manual instrument with a full digital sequencer as well as 8 pistons per manual. It contains a few ranks from the earlier Walker organ that provide a soft English core to the sound, and the instrument as a whole is particularly effective in baroque and modern repertoire such as Bach and Messiaen (see website for specification). The Organ Scholars at Caius live in the central part of College for three years: the Junior Organ Scholar has rooms in St Michael's Court with a pedal piano, and the Senior Organ Scholar has rooms in Caius Court with a grand piano. Named Organ Scholarships provide much financial support; in addition to the standard £450 scholarship they receive a subsidized room rent and free organ lessons. In addition, grants are often available to those wishing to undertake organ courses both in the UK and abroad, or external qualifications (e.g. R.C.O. diplomas). Organ lessons are arranged with leading visiting teachers, and regular help and advice is given by the Director of Music, Geoffrey Webber, who is an organist and co-editor of The Cambridge Companion to the Organ. Some Organ Scholars spend a gap year in a Cathedral before starting at Caius, whilst others have done so after graduating. Organ Scholars have gone on to make their careers in a wide variety of musical activities, working as freelance conductors, composers, accompanists, répétiteurs and teachers, as well as serving as Cathedral organists. Prospective applicants are welcome to make an appointment to play to Dr Webber (gaw25@cam.ac.uk) at any time during the year.

Additional Activities

The choir also attends and performs at College Feasts (normally six each year), singing a variety of secular music including madrigals, folksong arrangements and close harmony. Choir concerts and services often involve music sung by one voice per part, and two independently-run groups, the Caius Men and the Gonville Girls, undertake extra singing engagements such as performing at Balls, weddings and conferences. Joint services and concerts with other College choirs also take place from time to time. Besides the work of the choir, music flourishes in the College principally through the activities of the Music Society. Regular chamber music concerts take place in the 98-seater auditorium which houses a fine model B Steinway concert grand, and there is a College Concert each term in the Hall with large-scale orchestral and choral works, conducted by students. The College participates in the University Instrumental Awards scheme and offers its own College Instrumental Awards, and all members of College can apply for financial assistance with special musical activities. The College has music practice rooms with pianos, and a two-manual harpsichord after Danzelague of 1711.

Appointments, Contact details

Appointments can be made at any time of year to sing or play to Geoffrey Webber who is also the Director of Studies in Music, and to discuss matters relating to admissions (tel. 01223 332448; e-mail gaw25@cam.ac.uk, post Gonville & Caius College, Cambridge CB2 1TA). HOMERTON COLLEGE

www.homerton.cam.ac.uk

Homerton is currently home to the highest overall number of students of any Cambridge college, a considerable proportion of whom take part in the College's varied and active music scene. The College boasts an orchestra, a steel pan group, jazz ensembles (Homerton Jazz), and two choirs. Homerton possesses an eclectic collection of instruments, including a harpsichord, marimba, vibraphone, xylophone, tubular bells, gongs, and a set of timpani. There are three practice rooms on site, available to all students, with more currently being built. Homerton owns several grand pianos, including a Steinway (model 'O') and several Blüthner instruments. As well as participating in College-based groups, many members of Homerton play and sing in University-wide ensembles and orchestras. The College holds two annual music competitions for its students: one in performance and one in composition. Although Homerton is technically the newest Cambridge College (gaining its Royal Charter only in 2010), it has existed as an institution since the 18th century and in 2018 will celebrate its 250th anniversary. Plans are afoot to build a dedicated performance venue in the College, following the construction of a brand new dining hall in 2019–2020.

In 2016–17, the Ligeti Quartet were appointed Ensemble-in-Residence at the Faculty of Music and at Homerton College. The former Master of the Queen's Music, the late Sir Peter Maxwell Davies, was an Honorary Fellow of the College, as is currently the renowned percussionist Dame Evelyn Glennie. Among the active Fellowship there is currently a College Teaching Officer and Director of Music (Dr Daniel Trocmé-Latter – also an Affiliated Lecturer at the Faculty of Music), a Junior Research Fellow in Music (Dr Ross Cole), and a Composer in Residence (Dr John Hopkins).

The Charter Choir

Homerton is unique in being the only Cambridge College without a chapel to offer both organ and choral awards. The Charter Choir of Homerton College, founded in 2009, sings a weekly Evensong at the Parish Church of St John the Evangelist (opposite the College) as well as going on cathedral visits and an annual international tour (French Riviera and Monaco in 2015; US East Coast in 2016; Germany (Bavaria) in 2016). Joint services with other choirs are also frequently held. The Choir released its first CD, Audite Finem, in 2014. Several clips of the choir can be found on our website.

The Charter Choir comprises up to 20 choral scholars and a number of volunteers (normally undergraduates). In addition to the annual stipend of £100, choral scholars receive a generous further subsidy towards singing lessons, an allowance of which they are expected to make full use. Homerton has a visiting singing teacher, although members of the Choir are free to take lessons with whomever they choose.

The normal weekly schedule during term-time for the Charter Choir is as follows:

Tuesday	5.15pm–6.15pm	Rehearsal
	6.30pm–7.15pm	Choral Evensong
Friday	5.15pm–7pm	Rehearsal

The Choir also sings in the end-of-term concerts, organised by the Homerton College Music Society (HCMS), and there are also occasional other weekend and weekday commitments, including two carol services and a Choral Eucharist on Ash Wednesday. Although the workload is relatively light, a high standard of music-making is expected.

After Evensong on a Tuesday, all members of the Choir are welcome to join the Fellows and their guests for pre-dinner drinks before dining at Formal Hall free of charge, held in Homerton's impressive Great Hall, the largest of its kind in Cambridge at the time of its construction in 1889.

Every year the Choir tours abroad, singing a number of concerts and services in various locations. In 2014, the Choir released Audite Finem with EM Records, featuring music by composers as varied as William Byrd, S. S. Wesley, John Hopkins, and Sir Peter Maxwell Davies. Further recordings will be undertaken in future years.

The Organ Scholarship

There are normally two Organ Scholars at Homerton. The Organ Scholars' main responsibilities are to accompany the Charter Choir at all rehearsals and services, and to help with choir-related administration and general organisation. When no accompaniment is needed, they may be expected to sing with the Choir. They are also given regular opportunities to conduct the Choir, with informal guidance from the Director of Music. Organ Scholars are also expected to take a leading role in other forms of music-making at Homerton.

Organ Scholars each receive a stipend of £450 per annum, as well as free organ lessons with a teacher of their choice. The Senior Organ Scholar may occasionally be asked to play at Sunday morning services or funerals and weddings at St John's Church, for which additional payment is provided. Free Formal Hall is provided after Tuesday Evensong.

The Organ Scholars are accommodated in en-suite rooms in College. The organ at St John's Church (a two-manual Walker instrument) is available as a practice instrument during the church's regular opening hours. In addition, the Organ Scholars are provided with a digital piano in their College room.

Homerton also offers an Accompanist Scholarship. For more details, please contact the Director of Music or visit our website.

Jesus College is distinctive in offering equal opportunities to female choral scholars and boy choristers in order to maintain a lively and varied tradition of singing in its ancient and beautiful chapel. The Chapel Choir, which can trace its origins back to the foundation of the College in 1496, draws boy choristers from the local area to sing with male undergraduate singers, whilst the College Choir, founded in 1982 following the admission of female undergraduates, features male and female choral scholars singing together in an ensemble which has gained an enviable reputation. There are four sung services each week during term-time; the men and women sing on Sunday and Tuesdays, the men and boys on Saturdays and Thursdays. In addition, there is a weekly rehearsal for the Mixed Choir. The male choral scholars sing with both the boy choristers and the female choral scholars. For many years the choirs were run by organ scholars but, following a generous endowment, the College employed a Director of Music in 1998 and under the three previous incumbents, Timothy Byram-Wigfield, Daniel Hyde, and Mark Williams, both choirs have developed a highly-regarded reputation and repertoire, whilst sometimes combining for certain key events in the College's year. The current Director of Music, appointed in 2017, is Richard Pinel, formerly of St George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, who enjoys an international reputation as a concert organist, accompanist and choral director. A Fellow of the College, Richard is also Director of the Edington Festival and a trustee of New Paths Music.

The choirs have undertaken a number of successful collaborations with professional orchestras – the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, the Hanover Band, His Majesty's Sagbutts and Cornetts, The Saraband Consort and Britten Sinfonia have all joined forces with the choirs for performances including both Passions by J S Bach, Handel's Messiah, Fauré's Requiem, Monteverdi's Vespers, Haydn's Nelson Mass, Britten's St Nicolas and Elgar's The Dream of Gerontius – and the Choir regularly performs with other Cambridge college choirs and groups from further afield. With regular tours (most recently to Italy, Hong Kong, France, Sri Lanka, India, Germany, the Ukraine and the USA) and concerts, recordings, and broadcasts, Jesus College Choral Scholars are able to enjoy music-making of an especially high standard, whilst finding time to pursue other interests during their undergraduate careers. All tours are fully subsidised and no contribution is expected from choir members.

The College Choir has developed a unique reputation for international outreach in recent years, running singing workshops with disadvantaged children in India and Sri Lanka as part of an ongoing collaboration with charities committed to musical education for children living in poverty. Both choirs have recorded and broadcast in the UK and abroad. CDs have been released on the Priory, Regent and Naxos labels and the choir currently has an exclusive contract with Signum Classics. The 2015 release Out of Darkness reached no. 1 in the UK Classical Charts and recent releases have received critical acclaim in the national and international press. The College boasts a vibrant Music Society which hosts termly orchestral concerts and weekly recitals. Many members of the choir play an active part in instrumental ensembles, conducting, orchestral playing and recital performances. Music is highly valued by the whole College community and a number of practice rooms exist for the use of students. The Chapel, which has an attractive acoustic, is home to three organs, a double manual harpsichord and a full-size concert grand Steinway piano, which has been used in professional solo recordings by artists such as Barry Douglas. The College is in the process of expanding its facilities to include more performance spaces, and former and current Honorary Fellows of Jesus College include Christopher Hogwood, Peter Hurford, James O'Donnell, Jessye Norman, and Murray Perahia.

Choral Scholarships

All Choral Scholarship applicants are expected to have an attractive and clear voice. Whilst technical ability is preferable, it is understood that the spirit of the scholarship is one of education – potential is just as important as proven ability. Good aural and sight-reading skills are required, owing to the range of music covered in a typical term, although, again, it is understood that sight-reading improves through experience. Those with weaker sight-reading skills would ordinarily be expected to spend more time preparing music in advance of rehearsals.

Choral Scholars are expected to make full use of their singing lesson allowance and to prepare music for services and concerts with care. The Director of Music is able to recommend singing teachers - current choral scholars are taught by Helen Groves, David Lowe, Berty Rice and Ashley Stafford. In addition, a number of workshops and masterclasses are arranged each year free of charge, and members of the choir enjoy both individual and group sessions with Alexander Technique teachers, osteopaths and other specialists whose advice may assist in developing a secure and comfortable technique.

Additional benefits include a number of Feasts and dinners at which the choir sings (and is fed and watered) and many parties. The College subsidises the cost of Formal Hall for each service sung. Accommodation during choir commitments outside term is provided free of charge. Whilst both choirs exist primarily to enhance the Anglican worship of the College Chapel, it is not required that those who sing be members of the Church of England, but only that they be prepared to respect the traditions and purpose of the Chapel. Choral scholars study a wide range of subjects – it is possible to combine the commitments of a choral scholarship with any subject in the University with discipline, efficiency, and goodwill – and they are often involved with opera, musical theatre, sport, student politics, and other extra-curricular activities in addition to belonging to the choir. Whilst some have gone on to study postgraduate singing, others have pursued an array of careers across various professions. The cultural, musical, linguistic, and spiritual benefits of a Choral Scholarship are great, and are open for all suitable candidates to enjoy.

Organ Scholarships

Candidates for Organ Scholarships are expected to have developed skills in organ playing to at least ABRSM Grade 8 standard. Whilst an accurate ear is essential, we expect to train organists during their time here; potential is equally as important as proven ability. A number of recent organ scholars have enjoyed gap years, often working in a cathedral environment, but this is by no means essential. Unique in Cambridge, the Scholarship offers the holder experience both in the training of boys' voices and those of the undergraduate men and women of the College Choir. In addition to regular service playing and conducting, there are opportunities for continuo playing, concerts, tours, recordings and collaboration with professional instrumental ensembles. The focus is on an all-encompassing practical musical development, preparing students for a potentially wide range of careers within the musical profession. Jesus College has a large number of former Organ Scholars now in the business. These include the world-renowned Bach performer Peter Hurford; Cathedral Organists Richard Lloyd, Geraint Bowen, Malcolm Archer, and James O'Donnell; the composers Robert Walker and Terence Allbright. The College Chapel, unusually, has three organs – the Hudleston Organ was built by Orgelbau Kuhn of Switzerland in 2007 and is highly-regarded for its versatility and warm sound; the Sutton Organ was built by Bishop in 1849 with a case decorated by Pugin and was restored to its original state by William Drake in 2012; and the Rawlinson Organ is a chamber organ of three stops built by Kenneth Tickell in 2010. The Chapel is also home to a beautiful double-manual harpsichord by Bruce Kennedy after a 1728 Zell, built in 2012, and to a 2006 Steinway concert grand piano. The value of a University Organ Scholarship is £450 per annum. In addition, the College covers the cost of regular organ lessons, improvisation lessons and singing lessons for its organ scholars. The current organ scholars study with Gordon Stewart and David Briggs. Other benefits include reduced room rent, use of a College telephone, and the same set of rooms in College for three years, plus all the benefits afforded to choral scholars such as free formal halls, feasts and parties etc. Organ Scholars are also provided with a piano in their rooms and unlimited use of the organs in the Chapel.

Richard Pinel, Director of Music, is always happy to meet prospective candidates for Choral Awards, to answer questions and to hear individuals sing informally. An appointment can be arranged at any time of year (except August) by contacting the Choir Administrator, Ms Alice Kane, on 01223 339 699 choir@jesus.cam.ac.uk.

For 'King's Voices', the College's mixed choir, please see page 21

Founded in the fifteenth century, the Choir of King's College is known for its many concerts, television and radio broadcasts, the varied repertoire it performs, and the distinguished soloists and ensembles with which it regularly performs. On Christmas Eve millions of people worldwide tune into A Festival of Nine Lessons and Carols and nearly two million in this country watch Carols from King's on BBC TV. While the Choir exists primarily to sing the daily services in King's College Chapel (Tuesday-Sunday Evensongs and Sunday morning Eucharists or Matins), its global fame and reputation, enhanced by its many recordings, leads to invitations to perform throughout the world.

Choral Candidates

Despite the Choir's renown, its singers come from many different backgrounds, and it is always worth making an enquiry or application, whatever you (or your school!) think of your own ability. You do not, for example, have to be an ace sight-reader, nor do you have to have had a chorister training. We are more interested in vocal potential – with the emphasis on potential. We are not looking for any particular 'type' of voice any more than we are looking for candidates from a particular school. Recent choral scholars have had many different strengths; some have perfect pitch and excellent musicianship skills, while others have big voices which are clearly going to go on to fill opera houses. Nearly every year King's choral scholars leave Cambridge to take up scholarships on opera courses at the Guildhall, the Royal Academy and the Royal College. The professional music world is full of former King's choral scholars. Among recent graduates, Edward Gardner is Chief Conductor of the Bergen Philharmonic Orchestra, and Andrew Kennedy won the Lieder Prize in the Cardiff Singer of the Year competition. Patrick Dunachie has joined the King's Singers. Others have very successful careers as instrumentalists: Joe Crouch is principal cellist of the Academy of Ancient Music and Julian Perkins is harpsichordist/director of Sounds Baroque. 'Choral Scholar of King's' on a CV will catch the eye of potential employers in many other fields.

'Perks'

King's offers free singing lessons and consultations with professional teachers from many of the conservatoires, as well as language coaching. Fees for 'extras' represent a significant bonus for King's choral scholars, and all associated expenses for concerts and tours, e.g. travel and subsistence, are covered. Additionally the College provides lessons in Alexander Technique. Choral scholars have a piano in their rooms and there is a grant to assist in the purchase of sheet music. Masterclasses are given on many aspects of solo and choral performance: recent instances have included Andreas Scholl on Lieder, the King's Singers on close harmony, the Hilliard Ensemble on renaissance repertoire, Berty Rice on strategies for dealing with nerves in performance, and Stephen Varcoe on French and German pronunciation. A number of leading voice teachers visit the College: these include Justin Lavender and Russell Smythe. The College Chaplain, Andrew Hammond, himself a professional singer, is always on hand for further help and advice.

Life in the University Music Scene

King's choral scholars have a high profile in the Cambridge music scene; they have recently taken leads in performances ranging from Don Giovanni and A Midsummer Night's Dream to Guys and Dolls; they direct shows, conduct operas and put on concerts in a wide variety of musical styles. Some have even been known to collect sporting blues! They form a close-knit group enjoying a good social life. Under the name 'the King's Men', they have a concert and touring programme of their own, which they manage themselves, additionally making recordings on the King's College label, and providing close harmony entertainments at dinners and parties, à la King's Singers. A number of their performances are given to support charitable causes, notably the annual visit to Cambridge Addenbrooke's Hospital to sing carols. The King's Men have been honoured to perform alongside high-profile artists from Rapper, Dizzee Rascal to the King's Singers. See <http://www.kingsmencambridge.co.uk>.

Concerts & Tours

King's offers many unique and exciting choral opportunities and the academic year 2016-17 is no exception. Recent performances have taken the Choir to the Sydney Opera House, Washington National Cathedral, Church of the Incarnation, Dallas, the Concertgebouw, Amsterdam, the National Centre for Performing Arts, Beijing and London's Barbican. Future choir tours are planned for North America and Canada, South America, Rome, Australia, and possibly India and Dubai. The Choir performs its own concert annually at the Albert Hall, appears at all the main festivals in the UK (Cheltenham, York Early Music, Lufthansa, Newbury, and at the Proms) and makes regular appearances at venues such as Symphony Hall, Birmingham and Bridgewater Hall, Manchester. There is a huge discography from EMI and Decca, as were, and more recently from the King's College, Cambridge label.

Stephen Cleobury, Organist and Director of Music (choir@kings.cam.ac.uk / tel: 01223 331224), encourages all potential choral scholars to come to see him at any time of the year. There are four countertenors, four tenors and six basses/baritones in the Choir and vacancies usually arise in each section on an annual basis. When you visit, Stephen will hear you sing, talk to you about the Choir and its work, and advise you on how to approach the audition and interview process. Although a number of choral scholars read for the Music Tripos, we encourage applications from those wishing to read any of the other subjects. PLEASE NOTE that it is now possible to read law, engineering and natural sciences at King's. (Medicine and architecture are the only subjects with which a choral scholarship cannot be combined.)

Organ Scholarships

The 'Mann' Organ Scholarship was founded in 1931 in memory of A.H. Mann, College Organist 1876-1929. The Organ Scholar acts as a 'cathedral assistant', playing for services, taking a part in training the choristers and probationers, and rehearsing and conducting the full choir. The four manual Harrison and Harrison organ, which in 2016 underwent a major restoration (no significant tonal alterations were made, but playing aids were updated), is essentially the instrument built by Arthur Harrison in the 1930s, alongside his projects at Westminster Abbey and the Royal Albert Hall. There is also a small chamber organ in Chapel and a tracker-action instrument (two manuals and pedals) available for practice at the College School. The Organ Scholars receive fees for 'extra' performing duties which significantly supplement the student grant and the organ scholarship. The College pays for lessons in organ playing and improvisation, singing and Alexander Technique.

The Organ Scholars accompany the Choir in its touring programme, which affords the opportunity of playing many interesting instruments throughout the world. Recent organ scholars have played the instruments at the Sydney Opera House, the Royal Albert Hall and the Concertgebouw, Amsterdam. The post provides opportunities for continuo-playing, notably with the Academy of Ancient Music and the Philharmonia Orchestra. Usually the Organ Scholar reads for the Music Tripos, but all other subjects can be studied, except Medicine and Architecture.

The Organ Scholarship at King's is a preparation for many different career paths in the musical profession. In the field of cathedral and church music, former organ scholars currently direct the music at Durham, Gloucester and Norwich Cathedrals, Trinity College, Cambridge, New College, Oxford, St George's Chapel, Windsor, and St Thomas, New York City. A number, such as Sir Andrew Davis and Richard Farnes, have gone into conducting careers, while others, such as Simon Preston, Thomas Trotter, David Briggs, and David Goode, have forged international careers as solo players. More recent holders are to be found in assistant positions at the Cathedrals of St Albans and Westminster.

Stephen Cleobury, Organist and Director of Music (choir@kings.cam.ac.uk / tel: 01223 331224), encourages all potential organ scholars to come to see him at any time before the auditions. When they visit, he will hear them play, talk to them about the organ scholar's life and work, and advise them on how to approach the audition and interview process.

King's Voices

King's Voices, the mixed voice choir of King's College, was founded in 1997 to give the women of King's the opportunity to contribute vocally to the musical life of the College and Chapel. The Choir numbers around thirty singers, mostly made up of undergraduates and graduates at King's. The Choir's current Director is Ben Parry, Assistant Director of Music at the College. Choral Awards are available to both men and women applying academically to King's – there are no subject restrictions.

The Choir has a regular programme of rehearsals and services and sings Evensong in the Chapel every Monday during University term. In addition to these services, King's Voices has a regular midweek practice, sings in the College Musical Society's Lent Term and May Week concerts, and performs both sacred and secular music at some of the College's formal occasions. In March 2001, King's Voices went on tour for the first time, taking part in an exchange trip with the University Choir of Cologne. Since then the Choir has visited one or more European city each year, including Venice, Florence, Bologna, Rome, Barcelona, Paris, Brussels, Amsterdam, Dublin, Berlin and Copenhagen. Nearer to home, the Choir has sung evensongs at local cathedrals (Ely, Bury St Edmunds) and has given concerts in churches throughout East Anglia.

MAGDALENE COLLEGE

Choral Scholarships

Magdalene College is among the smaller and more intimate colleges, enjoying attractive grounds which extend along the banks of the River Cam on the north side of the city centre. Architecturally, the College has a variety of building styles ranging from mediaeval to contemporary.

The Choir, made up of both Choral Scholars and other members of the College, sings for the two Choral Evensongs each week on Thursdays and Sundays in the candlelit mediaeval chapel. There is an additional rehearsal on Wednesdays. The Choir is conducted by the Precentor and Director of Music, Mr Graham Walker, who is assisted by the Organ Scholars. Our broad repertoire runs from the early Renaissance to the present day, and we are always keen to perform new works written by members of the Choir.

The Choir makes regular tours. In recent years the choir has toured in South Africa, Italy, Ireland, Devon, the Channel Islands, Malta, Wales, Sweden, Germany, Scotland, Ireland, Holland, Belgium, and Italy. Plans are in development for our first tours to the USA and the Far East.

The Choir also sings in UK cathedrals, including Westminster, St Paul's, Salisbury, Ely, Norwich, Llandaff, Ripon, Chester, Lincoln, Wells, Peterborough, and Rochester, as well as St Albans and Westminster Abbeys. The Choir has made several recordings.

The Choir is given a free Formal Hall dinner after each sung evening service, and there is a black tie Christmas dinner after the Advent Carol Service. It is asked to sing at occasional College feasts, including the Pepys Dinner, held on or near Pepys's birthday. Above all, the Choir is very much a social unit as well as a musical ensemble, and we are very proud of the friendly and sociable nature of the Choir.

Magdalene's Music Society is run by students. Regular concerts take place in College, including a chamber recital series. The College owns several grand pianos, two organs, and a harpsichord; there are three music practice rooms. The Choir sings with the College orchestra on occasion.

The value of a Choral Scholarship is £100 p.a., as for all Colleges; singing lessons are provided and funded by the College.

Organ Scholarships

A bequest to the College means Magdalene has a two manual (Great and Choir) Goetze & Gwynn organ, new in 2000, which received critical acclaim and greatly enhances music in Chapel. In addition to the new instrument, the modified gallery allows the choir to sing from the raised west end on occasions. There is a chamber organ in Benson Hall and a virginal is usually kept in the Senior Organ Scholar's room. Magdalene has a flexible approach to the appointment of College musicians. There are usually two Organ Scholars who work under the College Precentor. Between them they have responsibility for Chapel Music and the rehearsing and conducting of the Chapel Choir. There are two choral Evensongs each week (Thursday and Sunday) and occasional services for Feast Days etc during Full Term. The Organ Scholars have responsibility for providing music at the College Eucharist on Sunday mornings, after which there is breakfast.

Organ Scholars and members of the Choir are given a free meal in Hall after each sung evening service, and are asked to sing at occasional College feasts. The value of the Organ Scholarship is £450 pa. Each Organ Scholar has a set of rooms with a piano in College for the duration of his/her course, and the College pays for organ or other appropriate lessons.

The College

Pembroke College, founded in 1347 by Marie de St Pol, Countess of Pembroke, is proud of its traditions. The third oldest of the Cambridge colleges, it was the first to have its own Chapel. The Chapel was Christopher Wren's first building and, with its fine acoustic and unique organ, lends itself to much music-making besides the weekly worship. Notable alumni of the College include Sir Arthur Bliss, Christopher Hogwood, Emma Johnson, Tom Hiddleston and Eric Idle.

The Chapel Choir

Pembroke has a lively musical tradition in which the Chapel Choir plays a focal part. The Choir, directed by Anna Lapwood, offers the opportunity for regular liturgical singing, frequent tours, and CD recordings. Alongside regular commitments, the Choir places a considerable emphasis on outreach, working with local schools and churches, and organising Come and Sing workshops at Pembroke.

Pembroke Choir consists of twenty-five voices, made up of both undergraduates and post-graduates from Pembroke and elsewhere. The weekly schedule is comparatively small:

- Wednesday – 8pm: Rehearsal followed by Compline (9:30pm) in alternate weeks
- Sunday – 4:15pm: Rehearsal followed by Evensong (6:15pm)

For those who wish to sing more regularly, there is the option to apply for a choral exhibition (see below) and sing Eucharist every Sunday morning. There is also a small, voluntary Graduate Choir who sing Compline, alternating with the Chapel Choir. The commitment is therefore extremely flexible depending on individual preference.

On top of regular services, the Choir has an exciting schedule of concerts and special services adding up to approximately ten extra commitments a term. In 2016-17, these have included performances of Fauré's Requiem, collaborations with the Cambridge University Gospel Choir (who are based in Pembroke Chapel), a performance with Pembroke alumnus Eric Idle, and a fundraising concert in which the Choir collaborated with two local choirs, a lineup of professional soloists and a professional orchestra for a performance of Bach's John Passion.

The Chapel Choir embarks on two tours a year. The first of these takes the form of a Cathedral Visit in which they serve as the Choir-in-residence for a week or weekend of services. Recent visits have included St Patrick's Dublin, York Minister and St George's Windsor. Alongside Cathedral visits, the Choir goes on one international tour a year. Recent tours have visited Croatia, Finland, Estonia, USA, Norway, Germany and Singapore. In September 2017, the Choir will be spending two weeks in Zambia participating in extensive outreach work and giving performances. This trip is very much intended to serve as a cultural exchange in which the Choir can learn something about Zambian musical culture whilst passing on some of what we know in return.

Choristerships

Pembroke does not make choral awards until students arrive in October. Auditions for places in the Choir (known as Choristerships) are held towards the end of freshers' week every year. Choristers can expect to sing an average of two services a week, in return for which they receive free singing lessons and a free formal meal every Sunday. The Choir's singing teachers are Lucy Taylor and Colin Campbell.

Choral Exhibitions

Alongside regular Choristerships, the College appoints a small consort of Choral Exhibitioners each year. Exhibitioners sing all regular services, as well as a Sung Eucharist every week, providing an opportunity to explore some more challenging consort repertoire. The Exhibitioners also have a separate rehearsal from 5:15-6:15 on Friday evenings, in which they rehearse for Sunday's services and any other upcoming projects. Exhibitioners are encouraged to take the lead with the Choir's extensive outreach work, both continuing existing projects and exploring means of expansion. In return, they receive the standard choir benefits alongside a small annual stipend.

Organ Scholarships

The Organ Scholars at Pembroke work directly with the Director of Music, taking on responsibility for planning the music of the Chapel Services and for recruiting and training the Choir. The College sets considerable store on allowing the scholars the opportunity to shape the musical life of the Chapel, ensuring a degree of autonomy in making musical decisions and extensive experience in conducting. Organ scholars are expected to attend all choral services, resulting in a commitment of approximately three services a week. Sunday Eucharist is entirely the responsibility of the organ scholars, who put together a choir of volunteers and exhibitioners, rehearse the music and conduct the service.

We aim to have two organ scholars in residence at any one time. The Director of Music supports the organ scholars and the choir, providing training where necessary and dividing up duties across the year, but the College sets considerable store on allowing the scholars opportunity for shaping musical life in Chapel. Their dedication and enthusiasm have created high standards of performance, but the commitment required each week is not so heavy as to prevent other interests; indeed, the restricted number of choral services has made it attractive to those with serious interests outside Chapel music as well as to those reading degrees other than Music.

Organ Scholars receive awards of £450 and free organ lessons, alongside being given luxurious sets of rooms in College with a grand piano (or an upright for the Junior Organ Scholar) and a harpsichord. The scholarships have been endowed by an old member, Nigel Graham Maw, and a late Fellow, Dr Sidney Kenderdine, to assist with the purchase of music and other benefits.

The Organ

The organ is originally of 1708 with Father Smith pipe work, rebuilt by Mander in 1980 in baroque style (two-manuals, tracker). It is particularly excellent for Bach and pride is taken in the voluntaries given by the organ scholars. The chapel also boasts a prestigious chamber organ by Bernard Aubertin, and a fine two-manual harpsichord.

Music in College

The musical life of Pembroke is enhanced by regular concerts given by both students and professionals. The College Musician, Joseph Middleton, organises the Sir Arthur Bliss Song Series, a series of recitals given by performers of the highest calibre. Recent recitalists have included Dame Felicity Lott, Sarah Connolly, Sir Thomas Allen, Carolyn Sampson, Wolfgang Holzmair and Iestyn Davies. This series runs alongside the Pembroke Lieder Scheme, providing coaching for the most promising Lieder singers and accompanists in the University.

Every Saturday at 4pm, the Pembroke College Music Society hosts a recital showcasing the talents of Pembroke students alongside professional musicians. Concerts of choral music are presented each term and these are complemented by choral concerts and a regular series devoted to the works of Bach (The Kenderdine Concerts). There is also a weekly recital series on Tuesday evenings in Chapel raising money for the Syrian Refugee Crisis. You can read more about College music at www.musicatpembroke.com.

Musical events in Pembroke make use of two particularly fine performance spaces – the Old Library, parts of which date from the fourteenth century, and Christopher Wren’s baroque Chapel. Occasionally, musical events are held in the Great Hall or the Master’s Lodge. Pembroke College houses Steinway pianos (Model Bs) in the Old Library and Master’s Lodge. There are two practice rooms, both with grand pianos and drum kits. The chapel also has an electric drum kit, an upright piano and an electric keyboard.

www.pet.cam.ac.uk

Peterhouse has nurtured a rich musical tradition throughout its history. During the Laudian revival of the 1630s, the chapel was renowned for its elaborate Latin choral services. The part-books dating from that period still belong to the College and are an important source for many of the great works of the Golden Age of Gibbons, Tallis, and Byrd.

In a new development, the College has recently appointed a Director of Music, who will work closely with the College's Organ Scholars to oversee the running of the Chapel Choir. Organ Scholars at Peterhouse will continue to play an active part in leading and shaping the musical life of the College and Chapel. With the support of the College's Director of Music, Organ Scholars will be involved in all aspects of running the Chapel Choir: regularly rehearsing, directing and accompanying the choir. The College offers Organ Scholars tuition on the organ, in conducting, and singing. This puts our Organ Scholars in a strong position to apply for posts involving musical direction at the end of their time in Cambridge.

The choir sings Choral Evensong twice each week during Full Term, on Wednesdays and on Sundays. In addition to these weekly services, there is a wide variety of other choral services over the year. These usually include a termly Choral Eucharist; the Advent and Christmas carol services; the Commemoration of Benefactors service; a Passiontide service during the Lent Term; and the St Peter's Evensong and Graduation Service at the end of the Easter Term. To prepare for these services, there are three weekly choir practices: a main practice on Fridays, and shorter ones before each sung service. This all makes for a busy schedule, but even so, many members of the chapel choir still find time to pursue a number of other extra-curricular activities to a high level.

The age and intimate acoustic of Peterhouse Chapel makes it a particularly suitable place to perform early music, and that is strongly represented in our repertoire. Even so, we sing a full range of music, incorporating works from all periods and schools of composition. All services and rehearsals are followed by free formal hall for the choir. Choir meals are traditionally very convivial occasions, and are supplemented by three or four black-tie dinners during the course of the year.

The College is very supportive of the choir and its activities, and in recent years has helped to raise the choir's profile in Cambridge and beyond. All members are entitled to free singing lessons with professional singing teachers. The choir goes on regular tours under the musical direction of its Organ Scholars, including most recently to Italy, Latvia and Iceland; and it sings in cathedrals and other major churches around the country every year.

Besides awarding choral scholarships, the choir also auditions students from Peterhouse and across the University. With this diverse intake the choir fosters links and friendships between individuals from a wide variety of academic disciplines.

The Chapel Choir at Peterhouse offers many opportunities for you to develop your own musical abilities and interests, and to work with an established, enthusiastic, and successful choir. You will find plenty of scope for refining your general musicianship, as well as developing particular talents, both in a regular liturgical context, and in special events such as College concerts.

Music at Queens'

Queens' is a very musical College, whose thriving musical life centres around the Chapel Choir and the St. Margaret's Society of Queens' (known as MagSoc), the College music society. The society gives a major performance each term, usually uniting the MagSoc Chorus (Cambridge's largest non-audition chorus) and the Chapel Choir for a performance of a large-scale choral work in the University Concert Hall or the University Church. Recent performances have included Mozart's 'Great' Mass in C minor, Brahms' Ein deutsches Requiem, Mendelssohn's Elijah and Tippett's A Child of Our Time.

Queens' boasts many fine performance venues, including the Chapel (designed by Bodley and built in 1891), Old Hall (which houses a Boston grand piano), the Fitzpatrick Hall (one of Cambridge's most versatile theatres, with an orchestra pit for operatic productions), and the Long Gallery of the President's Lodge. There are two music practice rooms, and rehearsals can also take place in the Old Music Room adjacent to the Chapel. The President of the College makes available the instruments in the President's Lodge to the best keyboard players, including two Steinway pianos and a double-manual Johnson harpsichord.

Queens' College Chapel Choir

The mixed Chapel Choir is directed by Ralph Allwood, Fellow Commoner of the College, and formed of twenty-four singers – usually seven sopranos, six altos/countertenors, four tenors and seven basses/baritones – and two organ scholars. The choir is run by the organ scholars in conjunction with Ralph Allwood and the Chaplain, with a Choir Administrator.

The Chapel Choir combines high quality music-making, ambitious and wide-ranging repertoire and commitment to detail with a friendly atmosphere and vibrant social life. The Choir sings two or three choral services each week during term, in addition to additional events, such as Eucharist on Feast Days, Catholic Masses, Commemorations of Benefactors, weddings and memorial services, and a busy schedule of concerts and tours.

Concerts range from recitals in Cambridge, such as being one of the four choirs (along with King's, St John's and Trinity) to sing as part of the weekend visit of the Stanford and Howells Societies, to concerts in London, such as Mozart's Requiem at St. Martin-in-the-Fields with the Brandenburg Sinfonia. Cathedral tours have included Canterbury Cathedral, St. Paul's Cathedral, Westminster Abbey, Southwell Minster and Truro Cathedral, and tours abroad have included Hong Kong, New York, France, Sicily, Germany, America and Hungary in recent years.

The Choir has an ever-growing discography, with widespread critical acclaim for recent recordings Flight of Song, Songs of Heaven and Earth and For the Wings of a Dove, directed by Dr Silas Wollston.

The Commitment

Sunday:	4.30–5.40pm rehearsal	6.00pm Choral Evensong	7.30 Formal Hall
Wednesday:	5.10-6.00pm rehearsal	6.15pm Choral Evensong	7.30 Formal Hall
Friday:	5.10-6.45pm rehearsal

Choral Scholarships

Choral Scholars are appointed by the College for three years, through the Inter-Collegiate Choral Awards Competition, and are expected to give full commitment to the Choir for the duration of the scholarship. There is an annual stipend of £100, and all members of the choir receive fortnightly singing lessons, with occasional other College funds to subsidise further tuition. All members of the choir receive a free three-course meal after Chapel after every Wednesday and Sunday service, with additional subsidised meals and social events throughout the year.

The Organ

The three-manual Binns organ, built in 1892, is without doubt one of the finest instruments in all of Cambridge, and is unique for remaining tonally unaltered since it was built. It is a beautifully voiced and hugely versatile instrument for accompanying the liturgy, as well as a very striking recital instrument, with a termly series of organ recitals consisting not only of organists from around Cambridge, but also attracting professional and concert organists from around the UK and abroad. The instrument was completely restored in 2002 by Harrison & Harrison, and is in very good condition. The large Victorian chapel has a spacious acoustic, making it a particularly rewarding space in which to perform.

Organ Scholarships

Former organ scholars include Charles Villiers Stanford (1870–72) and Richard Hickox (1967–70).

Two organ scholars work with Ralph Allwood and the Chaplain to organise and deliver all the music in Chapel. Beyond playing the organ and often conducting services, the organ scholars oversee the administration of the choir (with the Choir Administrator), including the selection of music, and the planning of concerts, tours and other events.

The organ scholars enjoy the same privileges as members of the choir, including a free three-course meal after Chapel services and free singing lessons. In addition, the organ scholars receive an annual stipend of £450, and a further £500 each year towards organ lessons, conducting lessons and the purchasing of scores. Ralph Allwood coaches the organ scholars in choral direction.

The organ scholars are provided with special rooms in college, with university network phones, internet and pianos. The Senior Organ Scholar occupies some of the finest accommodation in the College, with a set of seventeenth-century rooms adjacent to the Chapel.

The organ scholars are central to the music-making in the college, and often conduct the MagSoc Symphony Orchestra and Chorus.

ROBINSON COLLEGE

www.robinson.cam.ac.uk

Robinson is the youngest of the Cambridge Colleges, founded in 1977 by the late Sir David Robinson. Its prizewinning buildings enclose a magnificent landscaped garden with a lake. Student rooms are extremely comfortable and the student food is regularly voted outstanding by the University's Student Guide. The College is very close to the Faculty of Music and the University Library and just a few minutes' walk from the centre of town. The spacious and beautiful Chapel houses two breathtaking stained glass windows by John Piper, and three outstanding instruments: a Frobenius organ, a Rubio harpsichord, and a Steinway grand piano.

Chapel Choir

The Chapel Choir is an exciting, friendly, and enthusiastic group comprising Choral Scholars and volunteers. As well as two services a week throughout term, it also gives concerts, makes occasional visits to cathedrals and exchanges with other choirs, radio broadcasts, and summer tours. Recent tour destinations have included Granada, Innsbruck, Milan, Paris and Hong Kong, where we sang a full-length concert on national television with international artists Yundi Li and Niu Niu. The choir has made several CDs, including Haydn's Kleine Orgelmesse, Britten's Ceremony of Carols, Schubert's Mass in G and première recordings of new works by Giles Swayne and Jeremy Thurlow.

The choir is conducted by the Director of Chapel Music, Mr Simon Brown, who is assisted by the Organ Scholars, the college's Music Fellow Dr Jeremy Thurlow, and the Chaplain.

Practicalities

Members of the choir receive a free formal 3-course dinner after Evensong every Tuesday, and generously subsidised singing lessons with outstanding singing teachers Stephen Varcoe and Lucy Taylor. The time commitment for singing in the choir is as follows: Tuesdays – rehearsal and Evensong; Thursdays – rehearsal; Sundays – rehearsal and Service, as well as some extra concerts and rehearsals each term, and a tour in the spring or summer. The choir typically comprises 24-30 voices. Several one-year choral bursaries are also offered to volunteers making an especially valuable contribution to the choir.

Choral Scholarships

Choral Scholars play a leading role in the choir. Choral scholarships are offered in all voices, mainly via the Intercollegiate Choral Scholarship Auditions, but also from time to time to internal candidates within the College. In addition to the free formal dinners offered to all choir members, Choral Scholars receive free singing lessons and a stipend set at the University's agreed rate, currently £100 per year.

Organ Scholarships

The quality of the Frobenius organ at Robinson, together with the high standards of the choir, has attracted some very strong organ scholars over the years. Past scholars have included Peter Dyke (Hereford Cathedral), Mark Hindley (Leeds Philharmonic Chorus), Tim Johnson (Precentor, Eton College), Sarah MacDonald (Selwyn College and Ely Cathedral), Andrew Reid (Westminster Cathedral). The scholarship at Robinson, with its mentoring and training from Simon Brown provides an ideal preparation for a successful career in the music profession. The Organ Scholars receive free organ lessons and vocal training, and a free formal 3-course dinner after Evensong every Tuesday. Under Mr Brown's guidance they play a role in choosing repertoire and planning services, concerts and trips. Organ scholars receive a stipend at the University's agreed rate, currently £450 per year.

The Frobenius Organ

The organ at Robinson is much admired. Made by the acclaimed Danish organ builder Frobenius of Copenhagen, and built in continuous consultation with the architect as he worked on the chapel itself, it harmonises beautifully with the building. The organ has 26 speaking stops in a continental classical style. It is a two-manual instrument with a responsive tracker keyboard action, balanced swell pedal, and electrical stop action, with a full set of thumb and toe pistons. It is particularly well-suited to Bach and the Baroque and Classical repertoire, but is also accommodates a wide range of solo repertoire up to the present time; it is also an effective accompanying instrument. A team from Frobenius' Copenhagen workshop gave the instrument a thorough mechanical overhaul in January 2009.

ST CATHARINE'S COLLEGE
www.caths.cam.ac.uk

With two distinguished choirs, including the UK's first college-based Girls' Choir, an active Music Society and opportunities for performance and participation from folk and jazz to classical and world music, musical life at St Catharine's is distinctive in its richness and variety

The College Choir, made up uniquely of undergraduates, graduates and former members of the Girls' Choir, is 24 strong, and is led by the Director of Music – Dr Edward Wickham – and two organ scholars. Choir members have the opportunity to engage with a wide variety of repertoire – from traditional Anglican evensong to large-scale choral works, from consort singing to experimental and 'world music' repertoire. The choir is embarked on a rolling programme of recordings on the Resonus Classics label; having completed a three-disc survey of contemporary music, the choir is now involved in a ground-breaking exploration of previously unrecorded music from Renaissance France. The choirs at St Catharine's have often been featured on BBC Radio programmes such as 'In Tune', 'The Choir' and the Sunday Service.

The Choir sings full choral Evensong on Sundays and either Compline or a special service on Thursday evenings. For some services (including Sunday morning Eucharist), smaller consorts drawn from the Choir are required to sing, on a rotational basis. The choir will also work on major choral repertoire such as Handel's Dixit Dominus and Bach's St John Passion.

Choral scholars receive £100 each year as well as many other benefits, including free singing tuition, subsidised foreign trips, and regular free dining throughout the term. Each summer the Choir undertakes a major tour. Recent foreign tours have included Hong Kong and the United States. Brief trips are sometimes undertaken out of term time – in recent times to such venues as Ely Cathedral, Oxford, Wells Cathedral, and Cardiff.

St Catharine's aims to attract talented and ambitious singers, but not necessarily those who want to devote all their energies to this one activity. Choral Scholars at St Catharine's have the opportunity to be involved in a wide range of musical and non-musical activities such as running the College Music Society, playing for, singing in, and even producing, musicals and operas. Most Choral Scholars give solo recitals at St Catharine's and beyond during their time in the Choir.

Organ Scholars: Duties and Benefits

There are two Organ Scholars at the College at any one time. At St Catharine's, the Organ Scholars have a great deal of responsibility for the conducting and accompanying of services, overseen by a professional Director of Music. They are also closely involved in the training and supervision of the Girls' Choir. The Senior Organ Scholar, along with the Director of Music, will conduct the majority of services, while the Junior Organ Scholar will also conduct a significant number.

Organ Scholars receive a stipend of £450 per annum, a generous towards music tuition (organ and conducting lessons) and music purchase, and a preferential choice of rooms within College, with piano. Other fringe benefits include subsidised foreign trips and some free dining.

Former organ scholars have gone on to pursue diverse careers within music – some within the Church and Cathedral world, others in West End theatre and repertouring. In particular, the experience of working with children provides St Catharine's Organ Scholars with an important training not available in many other Cambridge Colleges.

The Organ and the Chapel

The College Organ is a three-manual mechanical action instrument designed by former Director of Music Peter le Huray, which in 2000 underwent major rebuilding by the Dutch firm Flentrop. The instrument is much in demand from teachers and outside players (including the Organ Scholars of other colleges), while the chapel is often used for professional concerts and recordings. The Chapel also houses a Steinway grand piano and a two-manual harpsichord.

College Music

Aside from the choir, St Catharine's promotes a wide variety of concerts and musical events. The Kellaway Chamber Music Series attracts professional soloists and ensembles to the College for recitals and masterclasses, while The Music Society hosts diverse events such as informal musical luncheons, open mike sessions and jazz evenings.

For 'St John's Voices', the College's mixed choir, please see page 32

St John's has been at the forefront of choral music in the world for over 50 years, known and loved by millions from its broadcasts, concert tours and nearly 100 recordings. Founded in the 1670s, the Choir is famous for its distinctive rich, warm sound, its expressive interpretations and its mastery of a wide variety of styles. Alongside this discipline, the Choir is also known for its happy, relaxed and mutually supportive atmosphere. Andrew Nethsingha's immediate predecessors as Director of Music were Dr George Guest, Dr Christopher Robinson and Dr David Hill.

During term time, the Choir sings seven services per week: Evensong every day except Monday, and Eucharist on Sunday morning. The Choir is made up of fifteen Choral Scholars (four altos, five tenors and six basses) who are known as the 'Gents' and the sixteen Choristers and four Probationers, educated at St John's College School, who sing treble.

Choral Scholarships

Those applying to be St John's Choral Scholars are expected to have a good voice, though not necessarily one trained in the choral tradition. Although a proficient sight-reading ability is desirable, it is not essential, provided that applicants demonstrate a strong work ethic and eagerness to improve. The College funds singing lessons for all Choral Scholars with the Choir's Vocal Consultant, Mr David Lowe, and covers the costs of all Choir tours and external engagements. Choral Scholars also receive substantial fees for tours, concerts and broadcasts. Alongside singing with the Choir, Choral Scholars are encouraged to develop singing activities outside the College and many choose to sing in the large number of operas and concerts which happen in Cambridge throughout the year. Choral Scholars study a wide range of subjects and come from many different backgrounds, schools and musical experiences. Many former Choral Scholars are now musicians of international renown. These include Simon Keenleyside, Iestyn Davies, Allan Clayton and Jonathan Nott.

Organ Scholarships

St John's has two Organ Scholars at any one time. Their duties are both to accompany the College Choir, and to assist in the training of the Choristers. A candidate for the Organ Scholarship should have a solid organ technique, good sight-reading, and the ability to improvise musically. A candidate should also have an enthusiasm for choir training and for enabling the boys and men to perform at a high technical and musical level. The College encourages the performance of new repertoire and a sum from the McKean Fund is provided each year for the purchase of organ music. Organ Scholarships are open to both men and women. The College pays for organ and improvisation lessons, and substantial performance fees are paid for the many 'extra' services and concerts which are undertaken by the Choir. Organ Scholars also benefit from playing continuo with professional orchestras and ensembles.

Most former Organ Scholars have gone on to pursue high profile musical careers - Stephen Cleobury, John Scott, David Hill, Andrew Lumsden, Adrian Lucas and Iain Farrington were all Organ Scholars at St John's. A full list of former Organ Scholars can be found on the Choir's website.

Herbert Howells Organ Scholarship

Since October 2013, the Senior Organ Scholar is known as the Herbert Howells Organ Scholar, in memory of the composer who was an Honorary Fellow of the College, and who directed the Choir during the Second World War.

Organ music commissions

The College has recently received a large donation to enable new organ works from leading composers to be commissioned for first performance by the Organ Scholars, who also have a leading role in the commissioning process. The first such commission was by Francis Pott and was premiered by Edward Picton-Turbervill in a live BBC broadcast in April 2014. Other recent commissions include pieces from Tarik O'Regan and Louis Andriessen, and a future commission is from Judith Bingham.

Repertoire

The Choir's repertoire is extremely varied, spanning over 500 years of music, from Renaissance polyphony and Haydn masses to the music of the 21st Century. It is also renowned for championing contemporary music, regularly enriching the repertoire in its commissioning of new works. Recently music has been written for the Choir by John Rutter, Judith Weir, James MacMillan, Jonathan Harvey, Gabriel Jackson, Matthew Martin, Michael Finnissy, Nico Muhly and Giles Swayne. Past commissions, by such composers as Howells, Langlais, Tippett and Tavener, have become firmly established in the repertoire of choirs worldwide.

Each term, one Evensong will include a full Bach Cantata with instrumental accompaniment and solos from members of the Choir. As well as its liturgical work, the Choir also has a prestigious concert programme with recent concert work including Bach St John Passion, Haydn Creation, Verdi Requiem and Walton Belshazzar's Feast.

Recordings and broadcasts

The Choir makes two commercially released CD recordings every year. On the Chandos label recordings included a disc of French music by Langlais, Poulenc, Vierne and Messiaen; collections by Tomkins, Sheppard and S. S. Wesley and The Call, a selection of anthems described as 'utter aural sublimity' by Gramophone Magazine. Most recently the Choir records on its own label, in partnership with Signum Classics. The first release, Deo, of music by Jonathan Harvey, was nominated in the Choral Award sector of the BBC Music Magazine Awards 2017. As well as recordings by the Choir, this label will also showcase some of the College's most talented current students and prominent alumni.

The Choir has become world-famous for its annual Advent Carol Service, broadcast on BBC Radio 3, as for its well as regular broadcasts of Sunday Worship and Choral Evensong. The Choir also frequently appears on radio and television overseas.

Webcasting

The Choir of St John's broadcasts weekly webcasts of its services - the first British choir to do so regularly - to up to 10,000 listeners from all over the world.

Concerts and Tours

The Choir is regularly invited to perform overseas, visiting Japan, Brazil, South Africa, Australia, the USA, Hong Kong and Singapore as well countries throughout Europe. As well as concerts abroad, the Choir performs regularly in the UK, with recent concert venues including the Birmingham Symphony Hall, Royal Festival Hall, Cadogan Hall and Royal Albert Hall. The Choir performs with leading orchestras such as Britten Sinfonia, London Mozart Players, the Philharmonia, Royal Philharmonic Orchestra and the English Chamber Orchestra.

'The Gentlemen of St John's'

As well as forming the back row of the Choir, the Choral Scholars or 'Gents' also perform as a self-directed ensemble. With a repertoire of music ranging from sacred music and folksongs to their prized close-harmony arrangements (mostly written by current and former members), the Gents is a very popular group in College. As well as the legendary 5.00 a.m. slot at the St John's May Ball and Christmas gig at the Maypole, the members of the Gents have a busy yearly schedule of touring, concerts and recordings which can number over 50 external engagements. The Gents have recently toured Singapore, Italy, Germany and Thailand and have recorded their ninth CD, Indulgence.

Andrew Nethsingha has been Director of Music since 2007.

St John's College

St John's College was founded in 1511 and is the second largest Cambridge College. It has about 140 Fellows, 530 undergraduates and 300 graduates.

Music at St John's

St John's has a thriving Music Society with its own orchestra and chamber groups, for the many fine instrumentalists in the College. Jazz at John's is also very popular throughout the University.

A 180-seater concert hall was opened in 2012. Senior professional musicians at the College also include the conductor Dr Christopher Robinson, pianist Professor John Rink, and the composer Tim Watts. The composer Michael Finnissy has recently been appointed Composer in Residence. A professional period instrument orchestra, St John's Sinfonia, was founded in 2011 by Andrew Nethsingha and the world-renowned violinist, Margaret Faultless, who is the College's Musician in Residence. So far the Sinfonia has recorded two CDs, and performed with the Choir in concerts, services and radio broadcasts.

St John's Voices

St John's Voices, the mixed voice choir of St John's College, was founded in 2013 and comprises undergraduate and postgraduate students of St John's. Although the Choir has only been in existence for a few years, it has already developed an impressive reputation for high quality, emotionally-charged singing, and has drawn favourable comparisons with many much more established choirs. The warm acoustic of the stunningly beautiful Gothic chapel is much valued by the Choir, and the large and impressive organ means that the entire range of the choral repertoire is available to the Voices.

The Choir is almost unique in Cambridge in that it is specifically set up to focus on two parallel aims: concerts, and services in the Chapel. The Voices usually undertake one concert each term, in the College Chapel, which is usually repeated elsewhere, at least once in London. Concerts are often accompanied by professional orchestra. There is usually an annual tour, sometimes with a second short visit overseas, alongside trips to Cathedrals, College Livings, and elsewhere.

Alongside its very high musical standards, the choir is exceptionally friendly and sociable, and is most fortunate to receive the strong support of the College community.

All members of the choir receive a generous singing lesson allocation.

Services

St John's Voices sings Choral Evensong every Monday during full term, as well as occasional Compline and other services.

Tours

The Choir regularly tours overseas, and has recently returned from its first tour of the Far East, which included sell-out performances of Handel's Messiah in venues in Hong Kong and Singapore. At the time of writing plans are in development for visits to Canada, Switzerland and Colombia.

Other performances

The Choir performs regularly in the College Chapel, as well as in other locations as opportunities arise. There is generally a concert in London during the Lent Term. On occasion the Choir undertakes other engagements: they recently acted as on-stage chorus for the world premiere of Kepler's Trial, and opera composed by Fellow of the College Tim Watts, based on Ulinka Rublack's book The Astronomer and the Witch.

Rehearsals

The Choir rehearses every Thursday evening as well as at 5pm before Evensong on a Monday.

Recordings

The Voices are, at the time of writing, about to undertake their first recording, which will be released online with linked videos.

Choral Awards

Choral awards are available to both undergraduates and postgraduates.

The Colleges

Selwyn College was founded in 1882 in memory of Bishop George Augustus Selwyn, the first Bishop of New Zealand. The Victorian-Gothic Old Court, is home to many undergraduates, the dining Hall, beautiful gardens, and one of the largest chapels in Cambridge. Two newer courts, Cripps and Ann's, provide comfortable, modern ensuite accommodation for the rest of the approximately 350 undergraduates, 100 graduates, and 60 Fellows that make up the College community. The College is located in Grange Road, immediately behind the Arts and Humanities faculties in the Sidgwick Site, about a 10-minute saunter into the centre of town. Alumni of the College include actors Hugh Laurie and Tom Hollander, the Archbishops of York and of Wales, novelist Robert Lacey, and musicians Sir David Lumsden and Grayston Ives.

Newnham College, located just across the street from Selwyn, shares Selwyn's Chapel. Newnham was founded in 1871 to further the education of women, and is now a large and thriving women's College with about 550 students and 75 Fellows. Its spacious and beautiful gardens include adjacent sports fields and tennis courts. Newnham's many eminent alumnae include writers Claire Tomalin and Germaine Greer, actress Emma Thompson, and BBC broadcasters Clare Balding and Sara Mohr-Pietsch, the latter of whom was the first holder of a Newnham Choral Scholarship.

The Chapel Choir

Selwyn Choir has led worship in the college chapel since its foundation. For the first two thirds of the twentieth century, chapel attendance was compulsory for all students and the all-male choir of undergraduates was directed by the Organ Scholars and sang Choral Evensong every day. For occasional larger works, and on Sundays, the men borrowed sopranos and altos from Newnham. The mixed choir, formed in 1976 with the admission of women to Selwyn, now consists of up to twenty-six Choral Scholars (called Choral Exhibitioners), and the choir's link with Newnham continues to the present day. Most of the choir members are undergraduates or postgraduates at Selwyn or Newnham, with a few volunteers from other colleges, and they read a wide variety of subjects including Music, Classics, English, Physics, and Biochemistry. During term, the choir sings three services per week in the chapel, as well as concerts and services throughout the UK, recently in venues including Westminster Abbey, Lincoln, Ely, Edinburgh, and St Paul's Cathedrals. Its repertoire ranges from the 10th to the 21st century.

They have broadcast services for BBC Radio, have sung live on television, and every year undertake an international tour (in the recent past destinations have included Canada, the States, New Zealand, Israel and Palestine, and much of continental Europe). In an on-going collaboration with London's John Armitage Memorial Trust, Selwyn Choir has premiered major new works by some of the UK's foremost composers, including Jonathan Dove, John McCabe, Paul Mealer, Giles Swayne, Thea Musgrave, Gabriel Jackson, Paul Patterson, and Judith Bingham. The choir regularly works with international guest conductors, recently including David Hill, Sir David Lumsden, Judith Clurman, Grayston Ives, Andrew Carwood, Christopher Robinson, Nicholas Cleobury, and Timothy Brown.

The choir has made many critically acclaimed recordings, for labels including Priory, Herald, Kevin Mayhew, and Regent Records, with whom they work most frequently. They have made something of a niche for themselves recording single-living-composer discs, and have released several over the past decade, including discs of works by Colin Mawby, Paul Spicer, Paul Edwards, Gary Higginson, Phillip Cooke, John Hosking, and two discs of Alan Bullard, Mark Gotham, Benjamin Ponniah, and Iain Quinn. Their recent release on the Regent label, The Eternal Ecstasy, a selection of British and American music by Paul Mealer, Eric Whitacre, Morten Lauridsen, John Tavener, and James MacMillan, and other proponents of the so-called Choral Ecstatic Style, was featured as Classic FM recording of the week and spent three weeks in the Top Ten of the specialist charts.

Chapel Services & Rehearsals, Weekly Routine

As well as its normal routine (below) the choir sings for extra services such as Commemoration of Benefactors, Carol Services, late-night Compline, funerals, and weddings, for which fees are sometimes paid. Extra commitments such as concerts, tours, and recordings take up to three or four weeks per year outside of Full Term. Choir members are accommodated free of charge in vacations when they are in residence for choir-related activities.

Sundays 3:45pm-4:15pm Soloists' Rehearsal 4:15pm-5:45pm Full Rehearsal 6:00pm-7:00pm Choral Evensong	Tuesdays & Thursdays 5:15pm-6:15pm Rehearsal 6:30pm-7:15pm Choral Evensong	Wednesdays (not in examination term) 5:15pm-6:30pm Rehearsal

The Choral Exhibition (Selwyn and Newnham students)

Choral Exhibitions are available in all voices at Selwyn, and for sopranos and contraltos at Newnham. There are no academic subject restrictions. Exhibitioners are appointed by the respective College Councils for three years, through the Inter-Collegiate Choral Awards Competition, are expected to give a full commitment to the Choir, and are also encouraged to participate in general College music.

As well as an annual financial stipend (currently £100), all Choral Exhibitioners receive a generous subsidy towards singing and/or instrumental lessons, which can be taken with any of the University's visiting teachers (most Selwyn and Newnham Choral Exhibitioners have lessons with Anita Morrison, Paul Badley, and Stuart MacIntyre, who teach in Selwyn's choir vestry). Students reading Music are provided with a piano in their room, and, when College instruments are available, some Choral Exhibitioners reading other subjects can be provided with pianos as well. The College provides a free evening meal with wine to all choir members after Sunday services, and half price formal hall during the week. International tours are heavily subsidised.

The Organ Scholarship (Selwyn students only)

There are normally two Organ Scholars in residence, a Junior and a Senior, and their duties involve playing for all Chapel Services. There is a Sunday morning Eucharist in the Chapel for which the Organ Scholars play hymns and voluntaries, and Organ Scholars are paid extra fees for weddings and funerals. The Chapel Choir's accompanied repertoire includes the mainstream Cathedral and Collegiate repertoire and plenty of less well-known music. Organ Voluntaries are required before and after each service (although often Preludes on Tuesdays and Thursdays are improvised).

The Choir is conducted by the Director of Music, who also carries out all administration pertaining thereto, allowing the Organ Scholars time to develop solo repertoire (and to work towards their degree!). The Organ Scholars rehearse and conduct the Choir when the Director of Music is away, and also from time to time when she is not away, which gives an opportunity for training in choral conducting and rehearsal techniques. Organ Scholars can hone their orchestral conducting skills in the Music Society's orchestral concerts, and the Music Society Chorus.

The Organ Scholars are paid a stipend of £450 per year, and receive a substantial subsidy towards organ lessons, which can be taken with any of Cambridge's visiting teachers, all of whom are well-known recitalists (Gordon Stewart, William Whitehead, Stephen Farr, and Anne Page, among others). The subsidy can also be used towards singing, conducting, instrumental, or Alexander Technique lessons. Both Organ Scholars are provided with a piano in their rooms.

Selwyn chapel has two organs. The main organ is a magnificent mechanical action instrument on the west end gallery with 30 stops over three manuals and pedals, built by the renowned Québec firm Orgues Létourneau Ltée, and inaugurated in 2005. The specification can be found on the college web site. In 2010 we received a gift from an alumnus of a beautiful three-stop chamber organ built for the college by Kenneth Tickell. There is also a lovely single manual Stephen Morris harpsichord, built in 1985, and an excellent Model C Steinway in the dining hall. The college also owns about 18 upright pianos.

College Music

Sidney Sussex rose from the ruins of the Cambridge Greyfriars in 1596 and has long been a nest for professional musicians. Indeed the large chapel that stood on this site in pre-Reformation times was the regular venue for University ceremonies and was the venue where a number of early English composers took their degrees, including Robert Fayrfax (MusB, 1501; DMus 1504) and Christopher Tye (MusB, 1536). One of the earliest musicians in the College was the Royalist pamphleteer, author, and violist Roger L'Estrange (1616-1704), whose family were patrons of the composer John Jenkins. Earlier still, the great Elizabethan composer William Byrd would have been well-known to the foundress, Lady Frances Sidney, and indeed two very fine elegies by Byrd survive for her nephew, the poet and courtier Sir Philip Sidney. Currently resident in the College is Dr Christopher Page (1991), founder and former director of the multi-award-winning Gothic Voices, and Dr David Skinner (2006) who is a cofounder of The Cardinal's Musick, director of the early music consort Alamire (www.alamire.co.uk), and Sidney's first Director of Music.

Organ Scholarships

There are normally two organ scholars in residence at Sidney Sussex, and they work alongside the Director of Music and a mixed choir of some 24-26 singers. The Choir, which tours two to three times a year and regularly tours at home and abroad, is a major focus of College life. Organ Scholars receive an annual stipend of £450, free organ and singing lessons, and occasionally take on roles as administrator for recordings and tours (which carries an additional stipend). Other 'perks' include free national and international tours, Choir formals, and a number of social events throughout the academic year.

The Instruments

There are four keyboard instruments in the Chapel. The main organ from the Dutch firm Flentrop (2016); it replaced an earlier instrument by Harrison & Harrison. The stand-up positive chamber organ by Taylor & Boody (2013) is one of the finest instruments of its type, and was specifically built for earlier repertoire (A=465, and temperament is fifth comma meantone after Norden). The 'Bach' harpsichord after Michael Mietke (Berlin, 1710), built by Huw Saunders in 2010. The piano is a Steinway Model D (1984; restored and refinished, 2011). For further information and specs of the instruments, please visit:

<https://www.sidneysussexchoir.org/chapel-instruments>

The Commitment

Sidney is an ideal choir for those who cannot commit to a daily singing routine, but are still keen to make music at the highest level. The regular term-time commitments are as follows:

Sundays: 4.45pm rehearsal for 6.00pm Choral Evensong
Wednesdays: 5.15pm rehearsal for 6.30pm Latin Choral Vespers
Thursdays: 6.00pm-7.30pm rehearsal
Fridays: 5.15pm rehearsal for 6.30pm Choral Evensong

Extra rehearsals are occasionally arranged at the beginning of the academic year, and for recordings, tours, and special College events.

Concerts, Recordings & Tours

The Choir regularly performs at home and abroad and, more recently, has made a niche in making professional recordings for specialist markets, including museums, art galleries, and national libraries. Their first recording with the new early music label Obsidian (www.obsidianrecords.co.uk), Thomas Tomkins 'These Distracted Times', was awarded Editor's Choice and CD of the Month in the Gramophone, and they have since gone on to record and tour a number of innovative programmes. Their latest CD, music by Thomas Weelkes, was nominated for a Gramophone Award in 2013. The Choir tours two to three times per year, and has recently visited France, Italy, Spain, Germany, Austria, Holland and Dubai. The Choir also tours the USA once every three years, most recently California and Las Vegas (2012), and the East Coast in 2015, when we made our Carnegie Hall debut. The choir will tour Spain, Germany, Italy and Dubai in 2016-17. We also make an annual spring pilgrimage to Rome, where we perform in all four of the great basilicas including St Peter's. The Choir featured the music of Tomas Luis de Victoria live on BBC Choral Evensong, in the form of its popular Latin Choral Vespers, in Easter Week 2011, and is regularly featured on radio and other media.

Repertoire

Sidney Choir performs a wide range of music from late medieval to newly commissioned works. The Choir excels primarily in music of the 16th and 17th centuries (the research specialism of the Director of Music) and the late 19th/ early 20th centuries, but endeavours to maintain a healthy balance of music from all periods. Organ and Choral Scholars are invited to offer suggestions for the music lists, and we often perform works written especially for the Choir by members of the Sidney community and beyond.

Mixing with Professionals

Sidney is one of the few colleges in Cambridge to host annually a professional musician or ensemble in residence. The first incumbent in 2007 was the viol consort Fretwork, and in 2008 we welcomed the gothic and renaissance harpist Andrew Lawrence-King. The College's Composer in Residence is the American composer Eric Whitacre who is in post until 2016. The Tippett Quartet was in residence in 2012, while the internationally acclaimed organist Stephen Farr held the post in 2013-14. Our current Composer in Residence is Joanna Marsh. The College also regularly spotlights a number of professional musicians who work alongside members of the Choir, and provide very useful connections for music-making in the wider world.

The Director of Music is always happy to hear potential candidates throughout the academic year.

TRINITY COLLEGE
www.trinitycollegechoir.com

Trinity College's long and distinguished choral tradition dates back to the fourteenth century, when former Chapel Royal choristers studied in King's Hall, which later became part of Trinity College. Today's mixed-voice choir of around 30 Choral Scholars and two Organ Scholars has established itself as one of the leading mixed-voice choirs in the world.

Trinity's Director of Music is the conductor Stephen Layton (www.stephenlayton.com). He is also the Artistic Director and Principal Conductor of the City of London Sinfonia, and Music Director of Polyphony and of the Holst Singers. He guest conducts a number of orchestras around the world, resulting in regular collaborations for Trinity Choir with orchestras such as the Britten Sinfonia, the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment, and the Academy of Ancient Music.

The Choir's main focus during term is the singing of services in the College Chapel. Choral Evensong takes place on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Sundays. During the course of these services, the Choir explores a wide-ranging repertoire drawn from both Catholic and Protestant traditions. Music of all ages is sung and, in recent years, the Choir has collaborated with a number of contemporary composers and given several world premiere performances.

An important additional duty for the Choir is to sing at the six annual College feasts. Other traditional events include Singing from the Towers, when the Choir and Cambridge University Brass Ensemble perform from the three towers in Great Court; and Singing on the River, when the Choir sings from punts moored on the river. These events provide an opportunity for the Choir to explore a range of secular repertoire, from madrigals and partsongs to close harmony.

The Choir is socially rich and diverse. This is partly due to the range of academic subjects read by Choral Scholars – Natural Sciences, Maths, Engineering, Law, Theology, English, MML, Music etc. – as well as the range of backgrounds from which members come.

Tours and Concerts

Outside term, the Choir's programme of performances and recordings recently included BBC broadcasts of Bach's B Minor Mass and Christmas Oratorio with the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment in London, Haydn's Nelson Mass with the City of London Sinfonia in Aldeburgh and Cambridge, Poulenc's Gloria with Britten Sinfonia in Norwich Cathedral, and Handel's Dettingen Te Deum with the Academy of Ancient Music in London and Cambridge.

An ambitious programme of tours has taken the Choir to destinations including the USA and Canada, Australia, South Africa, Namibia, Zimbabwe, Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong, and Peru, as well as to many European cities. Recent concerts in North America include sold-out performances at the National Conventions of the American Guild of Organists and the Royal Canadian College of Organists, and a concert in New York to commemorate the anniversary of 9/11. The Choir has now undertaken two month-long nationwide tours of Australia as part of the Musica Viva International Concert Season, in 2010 and again in 2016.

Whenever the Choir is required outside term, food and accommodation are provided free of charge in College and travel expenses are covered if a special journey is required. Tours are also undertaken at no cost to the individual Choral Scholar.

Recordings and Broadcasts

Recent additions to the Choir's extensive discography include Howells' Requiem & other works, which won a Gramophone Award in 2012; Beyond All Mortal Dreams, settings of contemporary American a cappella music, which was nominated for a US Grammy Award in 2012; Baltic Exchange, choral music from the Baltic region; David Briggs' Mass for Notre Dame; Bach's Christmas Oratorio; Handel's Dettingen Te Deum; Handel's Chandos Anthems; Britten's A Ceremony of Carols & St Nicolas; and new works by Polish composer Paweł Łukaszewski, all released on the Hyperion label.

Recent releases include Northern Lights, a recording of the choral music of the Latvian composer Eriks Ešņvalds, and Kenneth Leighton's Crucifixus & other works, both nominated for a Gramophone Award in 2015. The latest release is a further recording of the music of Herbert Howells, Collegium Regale, which was awarded Recording of the Year by Limelight Magazine in Australia.

All services from Trinity College Chapel are webcast live and available to listen again on the Choir website. A searchable archive of over 2,500 musical tracks recorded live in services over the last few years is now also available on the website.

Choral Scholarships

Choral Scholars need to be enthusiastic and committed. The weekly schedule of rehearsals and services during term leaves ample time for Choral Scholars to pursue their academic studies fully, as well as to involve themselves in other activities. In addition to their choral award, Choral Scholars receive three free dinners each week, and are entitled to free vocal tuition – weekly during term – from visiting professional teachers such as Ann De Renais, Sheila Barnes, Sarah Fox and Roderick Earle.

The Choir is open to all students except those studying Medicine or Veterinary Medicine. Good sight reading skills are an advantage, but not essential, as there is plenty of time to prepare music in advance. Applicants with little church singing experience should also not be discouraged.

Organ Scholarships

Trinity always has two Organ Scholars in residence. Their duties are twofold: to accompany and to conduct services. In addition to their annual scholarship, Organ Scholars receive free organ tuition (with Colin Walsh, David Briggs and Stephen Farr) and three free dinners a week. A special annual bequest allows them to build up their own library of organ music.

Organ Scholars study choral conducting with Stephen Layton and have the opportunity to work with him on projects in Cambridge and beyond. Frequently in demand as recitalists, accompanists, and conductors, Trinity Organ Scholars play a prominent role in the artistic life of the College and University. After graduating, many have taken up important positions, both sacred and secular, in the musical world.

Trinity College Chapel's renowned organ was built by Metzler Orgelbau of Zürich in 1975, who restored the original cases and surviving pipework of the organs installed by Father Smith in 1694 (Rückpositiv) and 1708 (Hauptwerk). The action is mechanical. The College also has a chamber organ, built by Robin Jennings, which is used as a continuo instrument for services and concerts, and a practice organ built by Manders.

Music in College

Trinity is a very active College musically. Trinity College Music Society runs an orchestra and a chorus, and arranges regular concerts and recitals. There is a series of chamber music concerts given by professional musicians which takes place in the Drawing Room of the Master's Lodge twice a term and is free of charge to Trinity members. There are six music practice rooms next to the Chapel, each with a piano and one with a harpsichord, which can be booked by members of the college. In the Chapel there is a Steinway D piano and a harpsichord, and a further five grand pianos are available in College for pianists. Choral Scholars also have access to electronic pianos which can be loaned, free of charge, for use in individual rooms.

Further information

Stephen Layton is pleased to meet and hear prospective candidates for Choral or Organ Scholarships at any time of year. These informal meetings provide an opportunity to ask further questions about life as a member of the Choir and Trinity in general. To arrange an appointment, please call 01223 761528 or email: music@trin.cam.ac.uk

www.trinhall.cam.ac.uk

Founded in 1350, Trinity Hall is the fifth-oldest college in Cambridge and is home to a wonderfully intimate college chapel which provides a beautiful atmosphere for worship and music.

The Chapel Choir

Trinity Hall Chapel Choir is made up of around 24 men and women who sing for services each Thursday and Sunday throughout Full Term. The music undertaken by the choir covers the typical 'cathedral' repertoire from medieval plainchant to new commissions. Whilst the level of time commitment is comparatively low, the choir sings to a very high standard. Recent students have described the experience of singing in the choir as 'an invaluable learning experience', 'welcoming', 'inclusive', 'without doubt, the highlight of my years at Cambridge...an experience I would recommend to anyone with a passion for choral music'.

A typical weekly schedule for the choir runs as follows:

- Wednesday: 6.25pm-7.20pm – Rehearsal
- Thursday: 5.15pm-7.00pm – Rehearsal and Evensong, followed by free Formal Hall OR 5.30pm-7.00pm – Rehearsal, followed by free Formal Hall & Sung Compline at 9.15pm

Alongside these regular rehearsals and services, the choir sings for other important liturgical and college occasions throughout the year, as well as making visits to English Cathedrals and undertaking foreign tours – destinations for which have included North America, Canada, France, Italy and Germany. In recent years, the College also cultivated links with the choir of the Centre de Musique Sacrée à Ste-Anne d'Auray, Brittany. This highly successful collaboration resulted in a regular bi-annual choral exchange and the recording of the choir's first CD, captured in the magnificent acoustic of the Basilica built on the famous Pilgrimage site at Ste-Anne.

Choral Scholarships

In 2011 Trinity Hall joined the intercollegiate choral award scheme for the first time, allowing the choir to combine choral scholars appointed at the University Choral Trials with singers auditioned upon arrival as 'freshers' (both from Trinity Hall and from other colleges). Choral scholarships carry with them the standard University award of £100 per year, as well as free formal dinner following all choral services, free singing lessons with an excellent visiting professional teacher, choral workshops with a professional choir and heavily subsidised choir tours. In addition to their wider role as members of the larger chapel choir, choral scholars at Trinity Hall have opportunity to sing together as a small-scale vocal consort in their own right, both in service and concert situations.

Recordings

The choir now records regularly and, in recent years, has combined forces with the College's professional period-instrument Ensemble-in-Residence, Orpheus Britannicus. Their most recent disc of Verse Anthems and Services by Henry Purcell, entitled 'The English Orpheus' has been met with universal critical acclaim. Future plans include a recording of Dieterich Buxtehude's great Passiontide cantata-cycle 'Membra Jesu nostri' together with the soloists and players of Orpheus Britannicus and the London-based viol consort Newe Vialles and a disc of music for Advent and Christmas.

The Chapel Organ

In 2006, Trinity Hall inaugurated a superb new chapel organ, built by the Danish organ builder Carsten Lund. The instrument has twenty stops over two manuals and pedal, with mechanical key action and mechanical/electric stop action. Beautifully voiced for the College's intimate chapel, the instrument has proven to be remarkably versatile, enabling the Organ Scholars to practise a wide range of repertoire and equally at home in a solo or accompanying role. Described in the musical press as 'an organ of rarified conceptual coherence', this is the first organ to be built in the UK by Carsten Lund, whose firm has been met with unanimous praise and whose new instruments have been described as 'musically and visually striking' and as a brilliant combination of traditional and new methods of organ building. A full specification of the instrument, together with details of recordings and reviews can be found at <http://www.trinhall.cam.ac.uk/about/music/facilities/>

Organ Scholarships

In line with all other colleges within the University, the value of the organ scholarship at Trinity Hall is currently £450 per year and organ lessons are paid for entirely by the college. These can be taken with any of Cambridge's internationally renowned visiting teachers or any other approved teachers. In addition, Organ Scholars are given free singing lessons with the College's visiting professional teacher and are accommodated in a fine set of rooms in the centre of college for three years, equipped with an excellent piano. Formal Dinner is also provided free of charge after all chapel services throughout term.

Whilst the Director of Music will typically conduct the majority of services each term, his role is also to offer professional advice and guidance (including lessons in choral accompaniment, conducting and rehearsal technique) and the Organ Scholars (typically two in residence) are given ample opportunity to direct the choir in rehearsals and services, and to take much responsibility for the day to day running of the music in chapel in consultation with the Director of Music and the Dean. In addition to the choral services outlined above, the organ scholars are also required to play for a short service of communion each Sunday morning during term, that involves playing hymns and voluntaries, and additional, occasional services such as weddings and memorial services for which fees are paid.

Music at Trinity Hall

Outside of the life of the Chapel, Music plays a very important role at Trinity Hall. Organ and Choral Scholars can offer a significant contribution, whether as officers on the Music Society Committee, or as performers. The College's thriving Music Society presents an eclectic, regular recital series throughout term as well as organizing larger-scale events such as Musicals and orchestral concerts. In addition to these student-run events, the college supports a series of professional master classes and concerts, the former offering unique opportunities to Trinity Hall students to engage with professional musicians in the context of 'open' rehearsals, workshops, master classes and, where relevant, private instrumental / vocal tuition.

The college is fortunate in having a purpose-built music room which houses a fine Kawai grand piano, a brilliant double-manual harpsichord by Andrew Garlick (after Goujon, 1748), a drum kit, electric piano and various amps. There is also a Steinway Model B grand piano in the Master's Lodge, in which beautiful setting a number of the student recitals take place.

The College also poised to construct a new state-of-the-art Song School, designed by the award-winning firm, Níall McLaughlin Architects.
